Senate Urged To Expand Battleship Fleet to 35

Program Provides World's Most Powerful Navy With 701 Warships

Stimson Debate

APPOINTMENT of Henry L. Stimson to be Secretary of War was debated in the Senate, but a vote on confirmation was delayed until today.—Page 7.

A Mighty Fleet

Expansion of the fleet to provide a mighty armada of 35 battleships—a greater dreadnaught force than that of all present foreign navies combined—was recommended to the Senate yesterday by its Naval Affairs Committee.

The group, formally presenting the $4,000,000,000 naval bill, revealed for the first time the contemplated make-up of the huge fleet to be constructed. By 1946 or 1947, it was stated officially, the United States will have 701 warships in active service, compared to 369 now afloat.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt conferred with Admiral J. O. Richardson, commander-in-chief of the United States Fleet, on future operating plans for the force, and whipped into final shape his new $5,000,000,000 arms program, which may go to Congress today.

Fleet Move Speculated

Admiral Richardson arrived here Sunday unannounced and the purpose of his 5,500-mile trip from Hawaii was not disclosed. After his session with the President, Richardson told reporters "routine fleet matters" were discussed.

There has been increasing speculation since the capitulation of France that all or part of the fleet may be brought from the present Hawaiian base to operate closer to the Panama Canal, possibly even in the Atlantic. Admiral Richardson, however, said he knew of no disposition to move the fleet from the mid-Pacific.

Acting Secretary of War Louis Johnson, Acting Secretary of the Navy Lewis Compton and Harold Smith, budget director, went over the new arms program with Mr. Roosevelt. The new estimates, officials said, will total just under $5,000,000,000 and will be divided between the Army and Navy in the ratio of about 3 to 2, for planes, ships, tanks and other weapons.

In its report on the $4,000,000,000 naval expansion bill, the Senate committee said that by 1946 or 1947, when all projected construction is completed, the American fleet will comprise 35 battleships, 20 aircraft carriers, 88 cruisers, 378 destroyers and 180 submarines. The Navy had heretofore withheld any information as to the number of warships in the contemplated Navy.

Doubles Total Tonnage

The planned dreadnaught force would total 1,281,800 tons, it was said—about the aggregate tonnage of the present American fleet afloat and greater than all present foreign battleships, including Britain, lumped together.

Other world powers, however, have additional battleships building or projected, which will nearly double their existing battle fleets. The American dreadnaught armada when completed will about equal the planned battleship fleets of Japan, Germany, Italy and France, excluding French ships taken over by the British.

The Naval Committee told the Senate that the Navy must be prepared to defend the Nation in two oceans at the same time and that anything less is "insecurity."

"Our Navy, including our naval air forces," their report stated,

G. O. P. Expected to Name Martin Chairman With Willkie Approval

THE "TICKET" APPROVES—Wendell L. Willkie (center), Republican candidate for President, and his running mate, Senator Charles McNary (left), of Oregon, met for the first time yesterday and gave their approval to a revamped campaign organization, as word spread through Washington that Representative Joseph W. Martin (right), of Massachusetts, would direct their vote drive

Candidate Meets McNary for First Time; Maps Plans in Swift Round of Conferences; Vandenberg and Taft at Harmony Dinner

By Robert C. Albright

House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr., yesterday was marked for chairman of the Republican National Committee and manager of the Republican Presidential campaign of Wendell L. Willkie.

Subject to confirmation today by a subcommittee of the Republican National Committee, Martin's selection was discussed and reportedly ratified as the Republican team of Willkie and McNary conferred here on G. O. P. campaign plans.

Upshot of the first meeting between the Republican nominee and his Senatorial running mate was the expected designation today of John D. M. Hamilton, present national chairman, as the executive director of the G. O. P. campaign, operating under Martin.

In a swift round of conferences following Willkie's arrival at the Washington airport, plans for the revamped Republican setup were perfected.

Taft, Vandenberg Attend

The nominee was cheered on his campaign start at a crowning Republican Congressional love feast.

"At least this gallery isn't packed," Willkie told his hosts at the Republican harmony dinner at the Willard Hotel. Martin presided, and such former rivals of the Hoosier as Senators Taft, Vandenberg and Bridges made victory forecasts.

Within sight of the White House, where a Farley-promised Massachusetts delegation was aligning itself with the third term drive, Willkie was discussing a Republican campaign organization tentatively as follows:

National Committee chairman—Martin.

National Committee vice chairmen—Samuel F. Pryor, of Connecticut; Walter S. Hallanan, of West Virginia; Mrs. Grace B. Reynolds, of Indiana, and Mrs. Paul Fitz Simons, of Rhode Island.

Plans for a three-man "strategy board" apparently were out, but Willkie was expected to retain the 12-man advisory committee setup in New York.

Post for Hamilton

Hamilton was expected to be offered the executive directorship under Martin at a salary of $15,000 plus $10,000 for expenses, approximately his present compensation.

Places on the executive committee were expected to be provided for

Bill Would Stifle Bund, Leader Says

Nazis Will Fear Registration, Kunze Testifies

The German-American Bund would be forced "out of existence" by a pending bill requiring certain foreign-dominated organizations to register, the national leader of the bund told a Senate subcommittee yesterday.

G. Wilhelm Kunze, the witness, said "the practical effect" of the bill would be to wipe out the bund because "not a single person will have the courage to be an officer" on account of the heavy penalties imposed for "the slightest mistake in registration."

Subjected to a severe grilling by Senator Connally (Democrat), Texas, chairman of the Judiciary subcommittee considering the House-approved bill, Kunze denied that the bund engaged in military drills or received money from abroad.

Fears Persecution

He said that, because of fear of "persecution," the bund maintained no membership list. The Federal Bureau of Investigation, Kunze observed, "knows more about the German-American Bund than I do."

"I think that if we'd put about a dozen of you in jail, maybe you'd know who the members are," said Connally.

The bill would require registration of all organizations subject to foreign control which engage in political or civilian military activity; all organizations—foreign or not—doing both, and every organization whose purpose is the overthrow of the government by force or threat of force.

Applies to Six Groups

In explaining the bill, Representative Hobbs (Democrat), of Alabama, said it would apply only to six groups in the United States, including the bund and the Communist Party.

Kunze testified at his own request.

Packard Defers Action on Plane Motor Contract

More Study Required On Deal for 9,000 Engines, Executive Says

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 8.—The board of directors of the Packard Motor Car Co. today deferred approval of a proposed contract to manufacture 9,000 Rolls Royce airplane motors for the United States and England.

President Max M. Gilman told newsmen in a statement following the meeting that "the matter of a possible contract" had been discussed, but that no action had been taken because "there are many matters that require further study."

"The Packard Motor Car Co. is anxious to be of public service and is hopeful that a satisfactory agreement can be reached," the statement added.

Gilman indicated he would return to Washington soon for further conferences with the National Defense Commission. Of the 9,000 motors, 6,000 are for England and 3,000 for the United States.

He said the Ford Motor Co., which previously had refused the contract on the grounds it would manufacture the engines for the United States only, had turned its preliminary plans over to his firm.

Britain Curbs Tea Drinking, Allows But 2 Cups a Day

London, July 8 (U.P.).—A campaign against "luxury living" tonight hit the Englishman's precious cup of tea.

As Britain prepared to meet an unprecedented German blockade effort, Minister of Food Lord Woolton announced a tea ration of 2 ounces a week per person—two cups a day—effective tomorrow because "we are in for a long effort of siege."

Lord Woolton waited until shops closed today to make the announcement in order to prevent an overnight laying in of stocks.

Lord Woolton also announced that margarine and cooking fats will be rationed within a fortnight and that restaurants will not be permitted to serve a fish and meat course at the same meal. Icing confectionery also will cease.

Mrs. Roosevelt in Dark About the Third Term

New York, July 8 (A.P.).—President Roosevelt and Postmaster General Farley have a big secret they're keeping from the President's wife. It's that third-term business. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt told interviewers today she was "still in the dark" regarding the President's third-term intentions, which are confided to Farley yesterday.

Japan 'Insulted'

Britain Warned

By the Associated Press

Tokyo (Tuesday), July 9.—It is quite possible that continued refusal of Britain to close the Burma road to China may result in armed Japanese action against the British Crown Colony of Hongkong, persons close to the Japanese government declared today.

The war, navy and foreign ministries scheduled immediate emergency conferences to discuss the British rejection yesterday of Japanese demands that this last link between the Chinese Nationalist forces and the outside world be shut off.

Reliable sources said the Japanese would take "drastic action" if the British stand were not changed.

Advised to "Reconsider"

Foreign Minister Arita yesterday told British Ambassador Sir Robert Leslie Craigie his reply was not satisfactory and urged him to advise London to reconsider.

The Japanese press unanimously asserted that "an understanding" with the United States and Russia preceded Britain's rejection of the Japanese demand and repeated previous charges that the United States was acting as Britain's "watchdog in the Pacific."

The British refusal contrasted so strongly with the French and Dutch attitudes, which offered no resistance to Japan, that the shock to Japanese was even greater than it might have been otherwise.

Claims Nazi Backing

Neutral diplomatic quarters expressed the belief that Japan was not bluffing, the Burma road affair being regarded as a test case for Japan's entire program to assume control of European-owned territories in Eastern Asia.

Informed quarters said the Japanese plans for "concrete action" were complete and merely awaiting London's next statement.

The press reported Japan's roving emissary, Noatake Sato, had conferred with German Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop and had received indications that Germany would back Japan in any action against Britain in the Orient.

Japanese resentment also flared against the United States for the arrest of 15 Japanese gendarmes in Shanghai.

War Minister Gen. Shunroku Hata is reported to blame all these relations with Britain and the United States on Foreign Minister Arita's diplomacy and is said to be determined to force a change with a showdown on every point.

The British reply was understood to have said that Britain's commitments to Burma and India pre-

Official Suggests U. S. Prosecute Nazi Consul, Aide

Los Angeles, July 8 (A.P.).—U. S. Commissioner David Head ordered Dr. Herbert Hoehne, of Germany, held for grand jury investigation today and suggested the possibility of prosecution of San Francisco German consular authorities on charges of conspiracy to violate the Federal law requiring registration of foreign agents.

Hoehne was arrested on charges of failure to register under this law.

Referring to documents seized from him, Head said he felt German Consul General Fritz Wiedemann at San Francisco, and H. H. Loeper, chancellor of the consulate there, might be subject to prosecution.

"When consular officials step out of their role as officers of their government and begin contacting agents who are not accredited, their immunity would not be valid," he said.

Sen. Copeland Estate Reduced to $32,411

New York, July 8 (A.P.).—An accounting filed in Surrogates' Court today set the gross estate of the late U. S. Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), of New York, at $33,498 in cash and securities, which had been reduced since his death in 1938, to a balance of $32,411.

'Fierce Frown' of British Wife Captures Armed Nazi Airman

By the Associated Press

London, July 8.—An unarmed British housewife put on her "fiercest frown" today and captured a German aviator who parachuted from his disabled plane into her front yard and gave up his pistol when she demanded his surrender.

His plane was shot down by British Spitfires in a fight over northwestern England.

Mrs. Nora Cardwell's husband, away from home at the time, said afterward:

"I think she did very well."

But Mrs. Cardwell, 5 feet 8 inches tall, didn't want to make a "song and dance" over what she called "the affair."

She just marched up to the German, demanded his gun and sent him hustling along to internment when help came later.

"I was convinced he was a parachutist when I saw him floating to the ground," she said. "I went straight to the telephone, but it was out of order. So I told a boy to go on a bicycle for the police.

"I thought if he was a parachutist it was best to tackle him right away. There were two or three people about, but they didn't do anything.

"So I put on my fiercest frown and walked up to the man. I felt tiny beside him." She said the German must have been at least 6 feet tall.

"But I could see he was terrified. He looked green."

She said when she first looked at the German she thought he was unarmed—but when she reached him she saw he had a pistol.

She pointed to the gun and demanded:

"I want it."

She got it. And after that she marched him off to await the police.

Admiral Arrested

By the Associated Press

London, July 8.—Bomb-battered Britain tonight traded Germany blow for blow in war from the air, and estimated 1,760,000 fighting men were ready to beat off invasion.

Her war against suspected potential fifth columnists, meanwhile, reached into high places with the arrest of Admiral Sir Barry Domville, former director of naval intelligence. His wife was arrested with him, and it was reported they would be interned. The charges were not disclosed.

Sir Barry, retired in 1936, went to Germany in 1937 to shoot chamois with Heinrich Himmler, head of the Gestapo. Twice before that he had been the guest of Adolf Hitler.

Headed Pro-Nazi Society

He was chairman of the pro-German organization "The Link," but some time ago announced that it had been dissolved.

Britons, told that defense forces were bolstered by a steady stream of men to the colors, were enjoined not to become too "defense minded" and that they must be "ready to meet Germany anywhere."

The armed forces backed up this implied threat to carry the war to the continent with new raids on Germany Sunday night, and again tonight, in answer to a series of German raids on Britain and her shipping lanes throughout today.

[There was no estimate of casualties in today's Nazi raids. Ten civilians were killed Sunday.]

8 Nazi Planes Felled

The British counted eight German planes shot down and three of their own lost in the furious air battles over this island. About 25 planes took part in an hour's battle over a ship convoy along the southeast coast.

Final statistics on Sunday's raids put German plane losses at eight—a total of 16 in 24 hours—and three British planes—a total of six lost defending England. Two British bombers failed to return from Sunday night's raids into Germany.

Britons listening at night to German short wave broadcasts took consolation in what they regarded as an indication that their own air force was striking back.

Listeners reported that "more German radio stations than usual" went off the air abruptly shortly before midnight.

British Grab Of Martinique Seen by Nazis

Semiofficial Organ Hints at Coup; U. S. Warships Standing by

By the Associated Press

Berlin (Tuesday), July 9.—The Deutsche Diplomatisch-Politische Korrespondenz, a commentator close to the German foreign office, charged today that Britain seeks to gain possession of the French Island of Martinique in the West Indies. It expressed pointed curiosity as to whether the United States would consider this an infringement of the Monroe Doctrine.

The Korrespondenz asserted that the British attack on the French fleet was in preparation "to rob colonies from its former friend" with the least possible danger, and asserted that the whole action was "in keeping with the British tradition of piracy."

It was recalled that the United States on June 18 had sent a note to Germany stating that the United States could not be indifferent to any transfer of ownership of Western Hemisphere territory from one non-American state to another.

The concern implied in the United States' note now becomes an active issue involving not Germany, but Britain, the Korrespondenz said, concluding, "nevertheless, an unambiguous reaction on the part of Washington is not yet in sight."

Great Britain has officially assured the United States that she is not maintaining a blockade of Martinique against the French cruiser Jeanne D'Arc and aircraft carrier Bearn, but a half-dozen American destroyers and a heavy cruiser, reported to be the Phoenix, are standing by in those waters to observe conditions and in the hope that no untoward incident will take place.

In the meantime, the French have withdrawn from the Dutch West Indies a cruiser and marine police forces they had put ashore for added protection to the oil properties in those possessions. The forces have been ordered to Mar-

Biggest French Ship Disabled, Britain Claims

Several Other Units Of Fleet Also Suffer, London Indicates

By the Associated Press

London (Tuesday), July 9.—British sources today claimed a "successful" action by the British fleet to keep from enemy hands France's mightiest battleship, the 35,000-ton Richelieu, launched at Brest but still not completed for service with the fleet.

There was no indication of the scope of the engagement, nor whether it was connected with the loss of the 1,760-ton British destroyer Whirlwind, which was sunk by a submarine yesterday.

The action against the Richelieu—presumably sunk, seized or damaged—was said to have taken place early yesterday.

[The British Press Association reported other warships were affected, including "important units of the French fleet." International News Service said.]

One of Four New War Craft

The operation was described as a continuation of the seizure of French warships started last week to prevent fulfillment of the armistice pacts between France and Italy and France and Germany. Under those terms the French fleet would have been assembled in French ports and placed under control of Germany and Italy.

Prime Minister Churchill has told Commons he had no faith in Axis promises that the ships would not be used against Britain.

The Richelieu was the nearest completed of France's newest class of four mighty warships, intended to dwarf the 26,000-ton Dunkerque and Strasbourg. Both of them were damaged in last week's fight off the Algerian coast.

Reported in German Hands

Although the Richelieu had been launched, it was understood her armament had not been completed.

Other ships of her class still incomplete are the Clemenceau, Jean Bart and Gascogne.

The two nearest completion, the Richelieu and Jean Bart, were reported in German hands after the Soviet Envoy Sees Von Papen About Demands Upon Turkey

By the Associated Press

Istanbul, July 8.—Russian Ambassador Alexei Terentiev was reported en route to Moscow today following a one-hour conference here with Franz von Papen, German ambassador to Turkey.

Informed sources said the two ambassadors had discussed demands which Russia is expected to make upon Turkey shortly.

In Turkish political circles a note from Russia setting forth these demands was expected some time after Terentiev reaches Moscow.

Speculation concerned the possibility that Russia might ask for concessions in the Dardanelles, guarding the entrance to the Black Sea, or in the Kars region of the Caucasus, which Russia lost in the World War.

Foreign diplomats say they understand Germany, Italy and Russia are working closely together in deciding what attitude should be taken toward Turkey, which last fall signed a mutual assistance pact with Britain and France.

Many expressed belief Germany was supporting Russian demands for an extension of Russian interests in this area. Italy, although reluctant to see Russia approach the Mediterranean, would likewise have to support Moscow, they said.

Turkey, meanwhile, continued intensive military preparations to meet any eventuality.

U. S. Taking Steps to Settle Gravel Strike Affecting 5,000

The Labor Department's Conciliation Division took steps yesterday to end a strike that threatened to paralyze construction in the District and throw from 5,000 to 10,000 men out of work by the end of this week.

The walkout involved some 200 employes of the Smoot Sand & Gravel Corporation, virtually the sole source of ingredients of concrete necessary for more than $50,000,000 worth of public and private construction now under way here.

Approximately one-fourth of the District's 25,000 construction workers will be out of work today and possibly half of the remainder will be affected by the week's end if the strike is not settled, officials of the Washington Building and Construction Trades Council estimated.

Some 1,500 men employed on about 14 District highway projects were laid off late yesterday when the $4,500,000 program came to a standstill.

At the Social Security and Railroad Retirement Board buildings, where concrete pouring was to begin today, 100 men are expected to become idle immediately and 2,500 in the next few days. The structures, under contract at $14,750,000, were being rushed toward completion to provide space for national

FACES OF THE VANISHED GREAT

Nowhere in the Capital is the passing parade of the great and near-great so visible to the naked eye as on the walls of the Occidental Restaurant, with its hundreds of autographed photographs of men who have run the Government and the Nation the last 40 years.

Harlan Miller

There hang the autographed likenesses of all nine Justices of the Supreme Court in one panel, with Roosevelt, Garner and the present Cabinet in the next panel; a democratic touch for the tourists as they attack their seafood and mixed grills. (But Knox and Stimson haven't been added yet.)

* * * *

Old Joe Cannon is there, his arms folded across his chest; Warren Harding in a Shriner's fez, with his Florence beside him; and Huey Long, stern almost to tearfulness; Lindy on the White House steps with the Coolidges and his mother; Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, with his white mustache 6 inches across.

* * * *

Side by side are the two Bob La Follettes, father and son; Bryan and his daughter, Ruth, who was in Congress; Joe Byrns the late Speaker, and son Joe, the young Congressman; Teddy Roosevelt, very confident and capable and vigorous, and his son, Teddy, who also became Assistant Secretary of the Navy, linking the past and the present; Tom Edison, curious-eyed and searching, and his son, Charles, whom he probably never expected to be a Secretary of the Navy.

"—once great, now forgotten"

Now there are 2,000 pictures in the collection Fred Buchholz's father started when he was headwaiter at the Willard, and they are insured for $50 each, though some are worth much more and some much less . . . All looking very important or fierce or noble or self-conscious. And most of them vanishing into limbo.

* * * *

One striking face belongs to a gentleman named Roda Roda, with a flourish of an autograph, a monocle, a fur hat, a chin dimple and the air of a boulevardier. In his day he was obviously the most important gent in the Capital. But last night no one around the Occidental could quite remember who he was; maybe a German diplomat of 25 years ago.

* * * *

Many of them, of course, will never be forgotten. There's Jusserand, in pensive profile, in a happier day for France; and nearby, J. Edgar Hoover, fingering a document; and there two Western tourists are eating lobster beneath a somewhat complacent Admiral Dewey, sitting with his sword and cocked hat in a heavily carved chair.

* * * *

Some of the Capital's guests are there, too: Steinmetz, the wizard dwarf, half crouched, looking over the back of his chair; John D. Rockefeller the elder, with his hair slicked down over one eye; Buffalo Bill, his locks falling over his shoulders, and a very juvenile Prince of Wales, looking starry-eyed and 18, and exceedingly pure.

No one foresaw him as a Nazi stooge in those days. Maybe he isn't.

* * * *

Over the pantry doors are rows of forgotten diplomats, and around the clock celebrities whose faces are now as indecipherable as their autographs. De Valera is next to one of the rear electric fans; Ramsay MacDonald, in heavy tweeds and a stand-up collar, the idealist to the life; mischievous little Lloyd George, and above him Gen. Pershing, whom he scolded in his war autobiography.

"—what! Is his picture gone?"

Occasionally a former Congressman drags his wife in to show her his picture high up on the wall, though most of the former Congressmen have been taken upstairs for storage. But the elder Henry Wallace is there, more cheerful than his son, and a Gen. James Allen with the champion military mustache of all time, a veritable ambush.

* * * *

Here is Marie of Rumania, a little sloppy in ermine; Herbert Hoover, much younger and resembling Babe Ruth a little; Senator Tom Walsh, with the fierce mien of a man who wouldn't marry at 70 and die on his honeymoon; Admiral Moffett, with whom I flew on the dirigible Shenandoah not long before she crashed, who died in the crash of the Akron.

* * * *

Here, too, are John W. Davis and Al Smith, who also ran. And here are scores of the big vegetables of our own time, Senators and generals and statesmen who are still guiding or rocking the ship of state, in pictures the same size as that of Woodrow Wilson with his speculative expression.

There's a sepulchral, almost celestial light on the face of Bryan, who ran three times; Teddy toys eternally with his mammoth gold chain.

As yet Willkie hasn't been added to the gallery.

Willkie in Bathtub When McNary Calls

1,000 at Airport To Greet Nominee; Woman Hugs Him

Wendell L. Willkie came to Washington yesterday for the first time as challenger to Champion Franklin D. Roosevelt.

He was cheered by a crowd of 1,000 that waited 30 minutes in a broiling sun at Washington Airport for a Republican Presidential nominee who bought all 16 seats in the Eastern Airlines plane from New York.

He was cooed over by several hundred women and hugged by one.

He was joyously received by a delegation of Congressional and party leaders who like Senator John G. Townsend, jr., of Delaware, left air-conditioned offices to "come down and see the boss."

Wins Debate With McNary

With Senator Charles L. McNary, of Oregon, his running mate, he debated which owns "the best farm in the country," and won the debate.

The airport welcoming committee decided before his arrival that Representative Frank Horton, of Wyoming, and not the candidate, should suggest that Willkie's next visit might be to take up residence in the White House. Horton spoke his piece as planned, but Willkie, unaware of the strategy, shouted into Nation-wide radio hookups:

"We'll be down here for eight years together, Frank."

Willkie, his plane delayed by departure ceremonies in New York, arrived 15 minutes late with a following of newspapermen, Oren Root, jr., 29-year-old University of Virginia law graduate and grandnephew of the great Republican statesman, Elihu Root, and Fred Rahtter, his private secretary.

Poses for Cameras

The cheering began as he ducked his stiff straw hat through the plane door. It continued as Willkie, with diminishing vigor, repeatedly rehearsed his grin and straw skimmer wave for news camermen. The cheering swelled to original volume as police cleared his way to official cars that were to take him to an air-conditioned suite at the Willard Hotel.

But before he could leave the airport, Willkie was cornered by 14-year-old Leonard Williams, son of Lawrence E. Williams, past president of the Washington Board of Trade. Leonard obtained an autograph for the minutes book of the Willkie for President Club he has organized, with headquarters in a tent on a vacant lot alongside his home at 7 Virgilia street, Chevy Chase, Md.

A crowd of 200 awaited the nominee at his hotel. Just as he was about to enter the elevator, he was hugged by a woman who said she was from Hampton, Va., and, although a "lifelong Democrat," for Willkie "tooth and nail."

The challenger looked tired. His face was gray and his blue summer suit rumpled. He was in the bath tub when McNary called for the first meeting of the candidates.

"Best Farm in the Country"

The official first meeting of the pair took place in the Fairfax Room of the Willard in the presence of another swarm of news cameras and microphones. They shook hands in front of a huge American Flag.

Willkie told McNary he hoped to visit "that farm of yours."

"I'd like to have you," replied McNary, who was one of the earliest farm-relief advocates. "It's the best farm in the country."

Willkie said his Indiana farm was the best in the country and McNary modified his claim by saying his farm was best outside of Indiana."

"Then," said Willkie, "we agree."

McNary was wearing his usual immaculate white suit and bow tie, which elicited from Willkie the remark that "the next time I come to Washington I'm going to get dressed as you are."

However that may be, Willkie made it clear to reporters who accompanied him from New York that he is not going to let any one dress him up as an Indian.

"I'm not going to do any of that stuff," he declared. "I've told the photographers they can take any picture they can catch me in naturally, but I'm not putting on any Indian suits."

The nominee's tiny and vivacious wife, Mrs. Edith Wilk Willkie, will arrive by plane at 12:30 p. m. today. With Rahtter, she and her husband will take a plane at 1:30 p. m. for Colorado Springs, Colo., where they are to be vacation guests of Gov. and Mrs. Ralph L. Carr.

Root will return to New York to open up an office from which he will direct organization and operation of Willkie clubs. A graduate of Princeton before attending the University of Virginia, he is a Delta Psi Fraternity brother of Franklin Roosevelt, jr. Root said he has met the President's son, but that he doesn't know him very well.

One of the youngest ever to hold an important post in a Republican Presidential campaign, Root started a Willkie boom of his own last April by circulation of a "declaration" which set forth "the obvious necessity of having such a man in the White House if the country is to be saved."

such active managers in rival candidate camps as David S. Ingals, who directed the Taft pre-convention campaign; Oren Root, youthful New Yorker who organized the first Willkie for President clubs, would head up the club organization and court the independent vote.

Miss Marion Martin would continue to direct women's activities, while Franklyn Waltman would again be information chief.

Senator Townsend, of Delaware, as chairman of the Republican Senatorial campaign committee, and Representative Ditter, of Pennsylvania, as chairman of the Republican Congressional campaign committee, would tie into the closely knit campaign organization.

Announcement Today

At a press conference Willkie said he would announce the new Republican campaign setup at 10 a. m. today, but declined to disclose details.

He said the plans must be finally approved by a special subcommittee of the Republican National Committee, but he would recommend "someone I've had in mind from the very start."

Martin was in the group greeting Willkie when he arrived at the Washington airport and later conferred with him at his hotel.

Join Roosevelt Drive

Martin, a pre-convention dark horse candidate and permanent chairman of the Republican convention, directed the successful 1938 Republican Congressional campaign and was Alf M. Landon's Eastern manager in the 1936 campaign.

Hamilton, still in New York, did not attend last night's dinner reception for Willkie arranged by Representative Horton, of Wyoming.

No speeches were scheduled, but the familiar "We want Willkie" chant brought the nominee to his feet with the evening's briefest speech. Martin took over as toastmaster, with the forecast:

"We are going to win in November."

Pledges Support

McNary, whose earlier first meeting with Willkie brought a "fight together" agreement, promised to "follow my leader."

Each of the three unsuccessful candidates present were introduced in turn.

Taft greeted Willkie as "Mr. President," McNary as "Mr. Vice President," and Martin as "Mr. Speaker." He pledged his support to the Willkie campaign, as did Vandenberg, who said:

"Willkie has captured the imagination of the American people as he will capture their votes in November."

Bridges asserted the New Deal is on its way out.

At the White House, just two blocks away, two leaders of the Farley-pledged Massachusetts delegation meanwhile joined the "draft Roosevelt" drive. Significantly following on Sunday's Hyde Park conference between the President and his Postmaster General, the Massachusetts Democratic leaders strongly urged the President to be a candidate or consent to be drafted. They denied any contact with Farley since Sunday's conference.

Speaking for the Massachusetts delegation, where Farley has counted the bulk of his delegate strength, Representative John W. McCormack said "it's absolutely indispensable that the President run. He is the outstanding man in Government life in the world today and is the one man who is the leader of the forces, in Government life, of enlightenment, progress and peace."

William H. Burke, jr., State Democratic chairman, indicated agreement with McCormack. Farley had 32½ out of Massachusetts' 34 delegates nominally pledged to him. McCormack said they are still for him if the President doesn't run. Both Burke and McCormack denied having any information as to the Presidents' plans.

Plans Colorado Trip

While Democrats throughout the Nation awaited the news given only to Farley, Willkie milled through a series of conferences with prominent Senate and Congressional Republicans, later dined informally with them, then booked passage today on a fast plane to Colorado Springs "for some sleep."

After a week of solid rest at the Colorado resort, he will start work on a brief acceptance speech to be delivered in Elwood, Ind., on a date to be fixed after August 1.

Asked whom he would take with him to help write it, he shot back:

"I roll my own."

Five minutes ahead of schedule for his first meeting with Willkie, McNary surprised his running mate taking a bath and it was in this informal atmosphere that they discussed and reached agreement on campaign strategy.

Later for 15 minutes, Willkie in a dark blue business suit and McNary in linens posed for newspaper and movie cameramen, sitting down, standing up, shaking hands, and "just chinning."

McNary, who was called to join forces with Willkie after his Oregon delegation had remained aloof through the convention, told reporters he was profundly impressed with Willkie.

"A Delightful Fellow"

"He is a delightful fellow, isn't he?" said the Senate minority leader. "He has a very human side to him that is charming. He'll make a great campaigner and a splendid President."

At his press conference, Willkie returned the compliment and announced complete accord with McNary on campaign plans. He said McNary is "enthusiastic" over the proposed new set-up and is willing to play any part in the campaign "I ask him to play." He said he expects McNary to play a very active part.

Waltman will accompany Willkie to Colorado Springs today for the candidate's "speechless vacation." Until he makes his acceptance speech, Willkie said he will have nothing more to say regarding party policy.

Questions and answers:

"Will you conduct a vigorous campaign?"—"I hope to do everything with reasonable vigor."

"Will you see Mr. Roosevelt while you are here?"—"I have no anticipation of it."

"Will you campaign in the South?"—"I will campaign through the country, but I will make some speeches in the South and I expect to have substantial support there."

He said he was a "below medium" trout fisherman, a "poor golfer," and he hadn't ridden a horse for a long time.

Garner Office Opened in Chicago

Wheeler Headquarters Also Established In Convention City; Farley Leaves for West With Roosevelt's Third Term Secret

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 8.—Supporters of two definite contenders for the Democratic Presidential nomination—Vice President John N. Garner, of Texas, and Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana—swung into action today on the site of the party's National Convention.

The Garner-for-President committee took over a section of the Hotel Sherman to be used as a base for operations.

J. Burke Clements, of Helena, Mont., opened Wheeler headquarters in the Congress Hotel with a promise to "solicit delegates in an aggressive way."

E. B. Germany, Dallas, cochairman of the Garner campaign, provided a touch of Texas color by riding into the lobby on horseback. He turned to serious business quickly by conceding that "Mr. Roosevelt can have the nomination if he wants it," but added:

"We have assumed from the beginning that Mr. Roosevelt will not accept the nomination and will not be a candidate for a third term. Of course, if he would do it, we're just wasting our time here.

"I don't think that the fact that Mr. Roosevelt will be offered the nomination will change things, because we don't think he will accept it."

Asked why he thought the Chief Executive would decline, Germany told reporters:

"In the first place he has served his country faithfully and well and it has been a severe strain on him physically, a great sacrifice.

"In the second place, we feel that he will not consider the present emergency great enough to justify him to set aside the third-term tradition."

Wheeler stated recently his name would be placed in nomination at the convention, opening a week from today, regardless of whether the President decides to seek renomination.

Clements reported a tour of 30 States convinced him that Senator Wheeler was "in a better position to get the nomination than any other man if Roosevelt is not a candidate."

"Both branches of labor are friendly to his candidacy," he added. "The conservative element of the party is friendly although he is one of the pioneer liberals of the country."

New York, July 8 (AP).—Postmaster General James A. Farley left for Chicago by train tonight still steadfastly refusing to disclose his big secret.

Farley, chairman of the Democratic National and State Committees, parried all questions concerning President Roosevelt's third-term intentions—which were told to him in confidence yesterday by the President.

Willkie Bandwagon Finds Room For 2-Pound 9-Ounce Baby

The smallest passenger on the Willkie bandwagon is Wendell Willkie Weiner, who weighs only 2 pounds 9 ounces.

Young Mr. Weiner—he was born June 28, a few hours after the Philadelphia convention nominated Willkie—is resting in an incubator and is being given oxygen at Columbia Hospital.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard B. Weiner, live in Colonial Village, Arlington, Va. The father is manager for George's Radio Co., at 2017 Fourteenth street northwest.

The night of June 27 and the early hours of June 28, Weiner listened to the balloting at Philadelphia, his interest mounting as his favorite candidate, Willkie, came nearer by each ballot to the nomination.

A few hours later the premature baby was born to Mrs. Mollie Weiner at Columbia, Dr. David H. Kushner performing a Caesarian operation. The child weighed 2 pounds 11 ounces at birth.

The Weiners had not decided on a name for the baby until yesterday. In fact, they had been much more concerned over whether the boy would live.

But yesterday when Dr. Morris W. Chase, the baby's doctor, said the boy's chances were good barring complications, although he had lost 2 ounces, and when Weiner read that Wendell Willkie was coming to town, he named his son.

It's Wendell Willkie Weiner.

sorry . . . I PREFER THE BEACH

Yes, I've heard about your two championship courses. I know that people come all the way from the middle west to play at both the Spring Lake Club and the Homestead Club, but I think I'll stay over here in front of the Bathing and Tennis Club.

A girl can't go in for all the sports you have at Spring Lake, so I spend my time swimming in this warm salt water — and of course I often go out with the people who fish. We get tuna and marlin and blue fish.

I do want to see the tennis tournament this week, because most of the players are Davis Cup winners; and I must look in on Sinclair Lewis who is opening Wednesday at the summer theatre — but these places aren't a bit out of my way, being so near the ocean.

No, I haven't time to tell you any more about what I'm doing here but the nice men who run the town have a booklet all about me that they'll give you or anyone who writes.

Bomber Here From Canal In Record Time at 246 M.P.H.

Race Back Follows Good-Will Visit To Guatemala

One of the Army's new bombers recently made the 2,300-mile trip from the Panama Canal Zone to Washington in record time—and averaged 246 miles an hour—it was disclosed here yesterday.

Under the command of Gen. George H. Brett, Assistant Chief of Army Aviation, the bomber, returning from a good-will visit to Guatemala, left Allbrook Field, Canal Zone, at 4:14 a. m., July 3, and arrived over the Washington Airport about 10 hours later—at 2:57 p. m., same day. And there had been a stop of an hour and a half at Miami, Fla. This flight clipped several hours off that of the passenger planes flying the route regularly.

Accompanying Gen. Brett on his return flight were Maj. Stanley Umstead, chief test pilot of the United States Army aviation; Capt. J. W. Barry, copilot, and Capt. T. L. Thurlow, navigator, who was the navigator for Howard Hughes on his flight around the world. There weer also two radio operators. Besides the staff were Fay Allen Des Portes, United States Minister to Guatemala, and his son, Bernard Berauch Des Portes, who joined Gen. Brett in Guatemala City.

The good-will flight was on the occasion of Guatemala's Independence Day celebration, June 29 and 30.

Arriving in Guatemala, Gen. Brett and his staff were joined by 61 of the finest bomber and pursuit planes stationed in the Canal Zone. With this squadron were 98 officers and 76 noncommissioned officers. These planes came from Allbrook Field, on the Pacific side of the Canal Zone, and France Field, on the Atlantic side.

Defense activities.

Several hundred men employed in construction of the Jefferson Memorial are slated to be laid off today, and a like number working on the War Department Building on Twenty-first street between C and E northwest may be affected soon afterwards.

U. S. Acts Speedily

Workers on all other Government and District projects, as well as those engaged in an estimated $14,000,000 worth of private construction, will be out of jobs if the strike continues for any length of time, labor experts said.

The Labor Department entered the strike negotiations soon after the sand and gravel workers walked out.

Commissioner John L. Conner, of the conciliation division, appointed to strive for a settlement, arranged conferences for today with representatives of the Sand and Gravel Workers Union, an A. F. of L. affiliate, and the company. Preliminary conferences were held yesterday.

Prefer Longer Week

The strike, it was understood, resulted from the company's action, under a wage and hour division ruling, in reducing its work week for men engaged in dredging operations to 42 hours to avoid payment of time and a half for overtime. The workers preferred the longer week which was allowed before it was held that they were subject to the Wage and Hour Act.

The union also seeks a 10 per cent pay increase.

The body was removed late yesterday to Eagle Rock, Va., where his parents live. Funeral services and burial will be held there at 2 p. m. tomorrow. Mr. Flaherty made his home at the Eddystone Apartments with two sisters, Florence and Ruth.

Dodge Widow Wins Legacy Of $2,500,000

Former Phone Girl To Receive $1,250,000 Cash in Agreement

By the Associated Press

Pontiac, Mich., July 8.—Mrs. Annie Laurine McDonald Dodge, $18-a-week switchboard operator of Core Bay, Ontario, before she met and married Daniel G. Dodge, heir to a motors fortune, will receive approximately $2,500,000 under a settlement of his estate disclosed today.

The agreement settled all the 22-year-old widow's claims to the estate of young Dodge, who died 13 days after they were married in August, 1938. Injured in a dynamite explosion at his lodge on Manitoulian Island in Georgian Bay, Dodge fell from a motor boat which was carrying him to a hospital at Little Current, Ontario, and was drowned.

Agreement Contested

Daniel Dodge's will, leaving his widow only a sum of $250,000, provided in a prenuptial agreement, and the Manitoulin Island Lodge, was contested. Today's settlement wrote an end to nearly two years of litigation.

Dodge's estate was estimated at about $11,000,000, representing accumulated income from a $40,000,000 trust fund set up by the late automobile magnate John F. Dodge for four of his children.

Today's settlement provides that 5 per cent of this estate be returned to the principal of the trust fund; that 47½ per cent be divided among Daniel's three sisters—Mrs. Wesson Seyburn, Mrs. Isabel Sloane and Mrs. Frances Johnson; and that 47½ per cent be divided; three-fourths to Daniel's mother, Mrs. Mathilda R. Wilson, who is the widow of John F. Dodge, and one-fourth to Mrs. Daniel Dodge, her share under Michigan law.

$1,250,000 in Cash

Thus the young Canadian girl will receive from this, after Federal and State taxes are deducted, approximately $1,070,000. In lieu of whatever claims she might make to her husband's share of the trust fund principal, Mrs. Daniel Dodge will receive a cash payment of $1,250,000, paid by Daniel's three sisters. The agreement further provides that her widow's allowance be increased from $5,000 to $7,500 monthly and be made to cover a period of two years, the $180,000 thus represented bringing her total inheritance to $2,500,000.

Another suit involving the Dodge fortune still is pending in Wayne County (Detroit) Circuit Court. John Duval Dodge, disinherited son of John F. Dodge, is seeking to set aside his father's will and gain a $13,000,000 share of the elder Dodge's estate.

D. C. Committee to Coordinate Child Refugee Aid Is Formed

Information and Clearance Bureau Planned to Deal With Placements; Mrs. John Jay O'Connor Heads Group

Formation of a committee to coordinate activities of organizations aiding in the care of European war refugee children was announced yesterday by the Council of Social Agencies. The local information committee was formed at the request of Eric H. Biddle, director of the United States Committee for the Care of European Children.

The council will establish an information and clearance bureau in its office at 1101 M street northwest. It will be staffed by members of the council and volunteer workers, said Mrs. W. A. Roberts, executive secretary of the council.

No definite statement can be made now as to the number of children to be received in Washington, or the agencies which will supervise their placement in foster homes, Mrs. Roberts said.

Mrs. John Jay O'Connor, national president of the Travelers Aid Society, is chairman of the committee. Capt. Rhoda Milliken, director of the Woman's Bureau of the Metropolitan Police, is vice chairman. Mrs. Roberts will be secretary.

Other members of the committee are Miss Patricia Morse, of the Board of Public Welfare; Miss Mildred Terrett, director of the Children's Protective Association; Morris Klass, director of the Jewish Social Service Agency; Msgr. Lawrence J. Shehan, director of Catholic Charities; William Savin, director of the Family Service Association; Miss Elizabeth Eastman, a member of the national board of the Y. W. C. A.; Isadore Hershfield, Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society; Mrs. Carlos Bell, of the District Red Cross Chapter; Bruce Mohler, National Catholic Welfare Conference; Herbert L. Willett, director of the Community Chest; Mrs. W. G. Van Vleck, president of the Washington branch of the American Association of University Women; Mrs. A. F. Hinrich, and Mrs. Stuart Rice.

New York, July 8 (AP)—Three hundred and fifty British refugee children arrived unexpectedly on the British liner Samaria today—18 hours after the first contingent of 71 reached New York on the Scythia—as volunteer workers speeded up a Nation-wide child refugee aid campaign.

Most of the newcomers were with parents or guardians and most had residences arranged. They ranged from babies to 'teen age, the average being about 8. Most of them had experienced air raid alarms, but none was found who had been in an actual bombing.

Arms Workers Linked to Bund

New York, July 8 (INS).—Evidence linking workers in vital munitions plants with the German-American bund was revealed today by Representative Thomas of New Jersey, a member of the Dies Committee, before a secret meeting of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania police executives.

Thomas charged that two employes of Picatinny Arsenal, near Dover, N. J., where large quantities of naval explosives are stored, were among regular visitors at Camp Nordland, bund rendezvous in New Jersey.

This information was uncovered by investigators who spent the last 18 days in three New Jersey camps maintained by the bund, Thomas said.

Pan American Parley Urged to Mediate War

Mexico Counts Hundred Dead In Vote Riots

Results of Bloody Presidential Election to Be Told in September

By the Associated Press

Mexico City, July 8.—Mexico estimated her election day dead at more than 100 today, but deferred counting yesterday's presidential balloting until Thursday.

The casualty list mounted steadily as "returns" from riotuous election districts were tabulated here. Hundreds were reported wounded.

Both Gen. Manuel Avila Camacho, administration candidate, and his independent rival, Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan, issued statements claiming victory, but the official results will not be announced by Congress until September. Neither claim of victory was supported by official or neutral information.

Police attempted to make an official tabulation of dead and injured in violent riots. Mexico City alone counted 19 dead and 251 injured.

Death List Grows

Five other towns heard from today reported an additional 15 killed. Puebla reported 5, Iguala and Coatepre, 4 each, and Monterrey and Guadalajara, 1 each. Many other provices were yet to be heard from.

Gen. Almazan said his reports indicated "100 or more" lives had been lost, and other political quarters and private sources agreed that this figure would be close.

Fights were reported over all Mexico, with scores of persons felled by pistol, rifle and machine-gun fire and by tear gas bombs and hand grenades. Voting places were wrecked and numerous ballot boxes were stolen.

Then the Shooting Began

According to the Mexican electoral law the party which gets its representative to the voting place first organizes and takes charge of the station. Battles to control polling stations led to much of the rioting.

Two American students seriously injured when they were caught in a hail of bullets yesterday were reported slightly improved today.

No further disorders were reported last night or today, but police feared a new flare-up Thursday when the votes are canvassed. Soldiers guarded the capital until dawn.

Some observers wondered how the count of the ballots ever can be made in view of the seized ballot boxes, the burning of numerous polls, and the fact that some "Almazanistas," claiming they were unable to vote at the regular places, established separate polls.

Revolt Threat Voiced

Juarez, Mexico, July 8 (AP).—A blunt threat of revolt against the government was made today by supporters of Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan, as elaborate plans were developed to prove charges of fraud at the polls.

Almazan, trailing 5-1 behind Gen. Avila Camacho, was estimated to have received about 9,127 votes in the State of Chihuahua; Camacho, 32,457.

Thousands of Almazan "thumb print ballots" were being prepared tonight for forwarding to Mexico City to refute the total of 1,000 votes conceded Almazan in the Juarez district as opposed to the 5,000 credited to Camacho.

"If President Cardenas does not recognize these votes, we will be willing to back Gen. Almazan in forming his own government," said Pedro Verdugo, Almazan committee treasurer and president of the Juarez Chamber of Commerce.

"It is better to fight for what is right than to be held beneath the heels of the Avila Camachistas."

Attache Here Inquires On Condition of Son, Shot in Election Riot

Three Washington youths yesterday told the United States consulate in Mexico City of their narrow escape from death in Sunday's elections. One of them, Andrew Jackson, 17, of 1825 New Hampshire avenue northwest, also telephoned his father that they were safe.

Paulo G. Hasslocher, commercial attache of the Brazilian Embassy, said he had communicated with the Brazilian Ambassador to Mexico concerning the injury of his son, Ivan, 19, in election riots, but had not yet received word of the boy's condition.

The Associated Press reported that Edward J. Mallen, jr., of Frannie, Wyo., who was near death with a pistol wound in his stomach, had a chance for recovery, and Leonard Durso, 18, Georgetown University student from Union City, N. J., wounded by a rifle bullet, had improved.

The other wounded Georgetown University student and Edward J. Mallen, jr., 28, of Davenport, Iowa, was described as "very ill" as the result of bullet wounds.

Parkman Clancy, 19, of 1013 Flower avenue, Takoma Park, Md., and Francis E. Maloney, jr., 3005 McKinley avenue northwest, were caught with Durso and Hasslocher in a mob racing up a side street to avoid police fire, the Associated Press learned from statements given the consulate.

Plank for Fixing Farm Prices Sought in Democratic Platform

Proposal Would Broaden U. S. Control In Event War Upsets Crop Programs; Wallace to Confer With Committee

Administration farm leaders indicated yesterday they would ask the Democratic National Convention to adopt an agricultural plank broad enough to cover governmental fixing of farm prices if economic developments should interfere with present crop programs.

Such a plank would be in sharp issue with the Republican platform. The latter favored continuing all present farm subsidy programs, with governmental crop control features removed. Price-fixing, on the other hand, would involve greater governmental control.

Aides said Secretary Wallace would appear before the Democratic Platform Committee at Chicago to ask party indorsement of present agricultural policies. Since the 1936 convention, Congress has voted the Agriculture Department broad powers to impose marketing quotas on major crops and to assess penalties against violators.

While Wallace often has expressed opposition to Governmental price-fixing, associates said developments arising from the European war had convinced him that the Government should be in a position to adopt rigid price controls if necessary to prevent collapse in markets.

Wallace turned to such a device when wheat prices recently tumbled more than 30 cents a mushel. He asked the grain markets to peg prices until European war factors causing the break subsided.

With American farmers confronted by dwindling foreign markets and accumulating surpluses, the Secretary is expected to ask the Democrats to pledge greater efforts to increase consumption among the Nation's needy. Such a plank, Agriculture Department officials said, might involve extension of the stamp plan of distributing surpluses on a Nation-wide basis. Much greater appropriations would be needed for such a program.

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration reported yesterday that it had spent $878,973,924 in carrying out crop control and farmer benefit programs during the 11 months ending June 1.

The largest item was $512,460,000 in soil conservation payments to farmers who cooperated with production control and soil building programs. Price-adjustment payments to producers of cotton, corn, wheat and rice totaled $200,695,000. Texas led all States with payments totaling $98,274,000.

Administrative expenses, exclusive of local farmer committees, were $16,593,935.

Next Hitler Blow Waited After Ciano Conference

It Will Be Aimed At Britain, High Nazi Leaders Sure

By the Associated Press

Berlin, July 8—Where and how Adolf Hitler will hurl his Nazi thunderbolts in Europe next stayed a secret tonight as German warplanes and submarines continued stabbing at the British Isles and sea lanes.

Not even Nazis usually in the know could say when the Fuehrer would give the word or what it would be.

But they were confident of three things:

That whatever Germany's next step may be, it will be a blow aimed at Britain; that Hitler and Italian Premier Mussolini will see eye to eye; that neither of the Rome-Berlin Axis partners is seeking or wants any help from France.

As far as Germany is concerned, Hitler—and Hitler alone—is deciding the nation's course in its reshaping of Europe. This time it looks as though he may surprise even those who think they know his mind.

Ciano, Hitler to Meet Again.

Whatever it is that Germany and Italy have up their sleeves, no announcement of it or how they hope to achieve it is likely to be made before Wednesday, when Italian Foreign Minister Count Ciano will return from a two-day visit to the scene of the western campaign.

Ciano, who conferred secretly with the Fuehrer here Sunday, is scheduled to see him again when he returns. Dienst aus Deutschland, German news service with close official connections, said Ciano later would be entertained successively by Marshal Goering, the Fuehrer's chief aide; Rudolf Hess, Hitler's deputy for party affairs, and Capt. Hans von Tschammer und Osten, Prussian state councilor.

Of the possibility that France might join forces with the Axis, informed sources commented that Germany and Italy are well able to settle their scores unaided and that Hitler's permission to the French fleet to resist the British was an act of chivalry, not an invitation to come into the fight.

Nazis Claim Shipping Blow

As if stressing this attitude, Robert Ley, head of the German Labor Front and chief of the Nazi political organization, contended in the newspaper Der Angriff that France must yield hegemony in European continental affairs to Germany forever.

Chief blow credited to German arms by the high command was the sinking by submarines of 21,500 tons of British shipping off the Spanish coast, including the armored 13,000-ton steamer San Fernando.

But the communique also reported:

"In England the air force raided, among other things, a railway station at Brighton, coast batteries on the Isle of Wight, port facilities and camps at Falmouth Wells, armament plants at Middleborough and Newcastle.

"Off the southern coast of Great Britain convoys and a large number of ships were attacked, two merchant ships and one transport were sunk and others severely damaged."

French Warship Reported Disabled

Germans occupied France's Atlantic coast.

The Richelieu went down the ways at Brest in January, 1939. Her speed exceeded 30 knots and she was armed with four 15-inch guns, 16 six-inch quick-firing guns and 18 smaller guns for defense against aircraft. The Richelieu's armor included a waterline belt 16 inches thick and deck armor eight inches thick.

The first British naval action to round up the French fleet came in a surprise move last Wednesday. Churchill announced that most of the French warships were seized, put out of action, or bottled up.

Because of wartime precautions there has been no authoritative information recently on the whereabouts of the Richelieu.

The most recent word came last week. At that time it was said the battleship had put out from Brest into the Atlantic, possibly on a trial run.

Britain Claims Heavy Toll

By the Associated Press

Alexandria, Egypt, July 8.—Daring the Italian war fleet to "come out and fight," British sources claimed today that in less than a month of operations in the Mediterranean and North Africa their land, sea and air forces have:

Sunk one destroyer, damaged or disabled more than one-tenth of Italy's total submarine power, with at least 15 submarines sunk, sunk numerous supply ships and smaller craft in raids at Tobruk and Bardia.

Smashed a safe passage through Italy's chain of submarines across the Mediterranean from the southern tip of Italy to Tripoli, shot down nearly 100 Italian planes over Libya, Erithrea and Ethiopia, bombed the Libyan coast from the air and shelled it from the sea.

Taken nearly 1,000 Italian prisoners in desert drives against Italian border outposts in North and East Africa, seizing more than 100 antiaircraft and antitank guns, several tanks, several completely equipped field headquarters and several million rounds of ammunition.

The first official list of Italian casualties among troops on the western Alpine and East African fronts gave 816 killed, 2,982 wounded and 315 missing.

Carol's Party Tightens Laws Against Clandestine Politics

By the Associated Press

Bucharest (Tuesday), July 9.—(Passed by Censor).—King Carol's new totalitarian party wrote heavy penalties into a new law today to guard its control of Rumania from any opposition within the country.

The law prohibits reviving any outlawed parties, any organization of secret societies aimed at overthrow of the new Party of the Nation, publishing of propaganda against the party or any action seeking to discredit it.

As this broad ban on all clandestine political activity was drawn up, Carol worked with determination to save Premier Ion Gigurtu's new cabinet from collapse. The King accepted the resignation of Horia Sima as minister of culture but refused to take up the resignations of three other Iron Guard leaders.

(Measures in the new government law were interpreted in some circles as a move to prevent the Iron Guard from becoming too powerful. At present the Iron Guard, as well as all other political groups except the Party of the Nation, is under ban.)

Meanwhile, the government denounced reports in the Hungarian press that Hungarian and German minorities in Rumania were ill-treated. Such charges were described as efforts to stir up ill feeling between Germany and Rumania at a time when Rumania "is affirming a policy of rapprochement with the Reich."

The Iron Guardists submitted the resignations in a move to force the formation of a 100 per cent pro-German, anti-Semitic government controlled entirely by their organization.

Carol replaced Sima with Rado Budisteanu, Iron Guard lieutenant. The others he tried to persuade to keep their places in the government, divided between Iron Guardists and followers of Gen. Octavian Goga, who once headed a pro-Nazi, anti-Semitic Rumanian cabinet.

PrisonShipSinking Laid to Capt. Prien

London, July 8 (AP).—London naval circles said tonight they had information that Lieut. Capt. Guenther Prien, whose U-boat last October penetrated Scapa Flow and sank the battleship Royal Oak, commanded the submarine that sank the British prison ship Arandora Star last week off Ireland. Approximately 1,000 persons, including German and Italian war prisoners, are missing.

HOW do you know, when you get the delivered price on a new car, that you're paying no more than you should?

How can you tell whether some obscure charge is legitimate—or a "pack" slipped in to enable the dealer to bid higher on your old car?

There's no reason for guesswork or doubt when you get itemized delivered prices such as you get from the General Motors "plainview" price chart and price tag.

On this price chart and price tag you can see the price of the car itself—the charge for transportation, based on rail rates—our charge for any extra equipment you may elect to buy.

You can add them together and get the full delivered price.

You can subtract the trade-in allowance from this figure and see the money difference you actually pay out. You buy on real value instead of simply the biggest trade-in allowance.

This is the standard price tag used by General Motors dealers to show what makes up the prices of new cars delivered to customers. "PRICE OF CAR" means the price we charge for the car itself, including reimbursement for Federal Tax and conditioning—"TRANSPORTATION CHARGE" means a charge for transportation from factory to you, based on rail rates — "OPTIONAL EQUIPMENT AND ACCESSORIES" means the charge for any extra equipment or accessories you elect to buy.

Shanghai Arrests Anger Japanese

U.S. Marine Charged With Insulting Honor Of Nipponese Army

Copyright by New York Times

Shanghai, July 8.—The Japanese army spokesman this evening, in connection with the arrest of 16 armed civilian-clad Japanese gendarmes caught in the American defense sector Sunday, charged the United States Marines with "insulting the honor of the Japanese gendarmes and the Japanese army" and declared that a "stoutest" protest would be filed immediately, Japan reserving the right to make demands later.

The incident, in itself, is relatively unimportant, but the attitude taken by the Japanese army creates a grave issue. It has long been known here that a portion of the "younger officer group" held violently anti-American sentiments and has been awaiting some incident which could be magnified in its extent.

Sensationally asserting that none of the apprehended gendarmes offered the slightest of resistance when arrested, the Japanese army spokesman charged the marines asked the gendarmes "are you Japanese?" and upon receiving an affirmative reply, assaulted them with the butts of rifles. He also declared that the marines trained loaded rifles upon the arrested men when the latter were, in trucks, being taken to the United States Marine headquarters.

Held Only 5 Hours

"The arrested men were first taken to the marine rifle range where they were forced to squat while the marines covered them with loaded rifles," the Japanese spokesman stated. "The arrested men also were struck brutally in the face when they asked permission to use the lavatory."

Careful inquiry has ascertained that the arrested gendarmes were first taken to the Marine headquarters where they were held briefly in a building in which there is a .22 calibre rifle range but that their leader was then permitted to telephone the Japanese authorities after which all 16 were taken to the marine jail. The total time the gendarmes were held was about five hours—from 10 a. m. until 3 p. m.

It is authoritatively stated from Marine headquarters that most of the gendarmes did resist arrest. Moreover they were all examined by the American medical officer. None was found to be really injured, three out of the 16 having superficial cuts which did not require medication.

The charge that gendarmes were "forced to squat" puzzles Marine headquarters, but it is admitted that the rifle range has no chairs. Presumably they rested on their toes or sat upon the floor or benches.

The Japanese spokesman also says the Japanese were at fault in not having notified United States authorities that they desired the presence of the gendarmes within the American defense sector Sunday when Gen. Juzo Nishio, commander-in-chief of the Japanese armies in China, visiting from Nanking, inspected the Settlement concession. Otherwise, they claim, the Japanese were blameless.

Called Insult to Japanese

The whole affair "constitutes a grave insult to the Japanese army," the spokesman declared, "for the Marines tore the gendarmes' identification cards from their hands, grabbed their bodies, and ridiculed them in an insulting manner, even in some cases, pulled their ears. Unnecessary, unwarranted violence was committed although the Marines knew the men they assaulted were Japanese gendarmes . . .

"The Marines arrested our gendarmes in an insulting manner in the presence of large Chinese crowds. We cannot but regard such conduct by the Marines as an unfriendly act . . .

"We must, therefore, conclude that the Marines have abandoned their responsibility as part of the joint defense forces assigned to Shanghai to protect foreigners as well as their own nationals in their American defense sector.

"We cannot overlook this case, which is a grave insult to the Japanese gendarmes and the whole Japanese army. We believe this case will acquire a serious nature in the future."

[In Washington, Secretary of State Hull said he had confidence that United States officials in Shanghai and Japanese officials there would deal with the affair in a reasonable and practical way.]

Charges Called "A Lie"

By the Associated Press

Shanghai, July 8.—The blunt retort, "It's a lie," was given by Col. DeWitt Peck, United States Marine commander, to Japanese accusations today.

Col. Peck directly contradicted Japanese denials of an apology and reiterated that Maj. Gen. Saburo Miura, commander of the Japanese gendarmes, had personally tendered him an apology before the men were released.

French Corporative State To Be Formed Under Petain

Aged Marshal Will Head Virtual Dictatorship With Title of Chief Of State; Lebrun's Resignation Seen

By the Associated Press

Geneva, July 8.—France, the cradle of Republican freedom in Europe, appeared tonight on the threshold of a virtual totalitarian dictatorship headed by Premier Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, the man who surrendered to Germany.

Dispatches from Vichy, seat of the German-mastered French government, said the 84-year-old premier would head a new regime under the Fuehrer-like title of "chief of state"—but without the personal power of Adolf Hitler.

These advices also forecast the resignation of President Albert Lebrun to make way for a new Nazi-Fascist government under Petain, World War "Hero of Verdun" who capitulated to Nazi legions in mid-June.

As described in the censored French press, Petain would take "only the title of executive power"—presumably as a figurehead—under this arrangement, with the government dominated by a triumvirate consisting of Gen. Maxime Weygand, former Allied commander in chief; former Premier Pierre Laval, and former Labor Minister Adrien Marquet.

The reshaping of France's 70-year-old republican government into the totalitarian mold was expected to begin Wednesday or Thursday at a meeting of the French Parliament in Vichy.

Constitution "Corporative"

The French press described the new constitution as "corporative"—a term Fascists apply to Mussolini's Italian government.

France's slogan, "Liberte, Egalite, Fraternite" (Liberty, Equality, Fraternity), may be replaced in the constitution by the words, "Travail, Famille, Patrie" (Labor, Family, Fatherland). The newspaper Petit Dauphinois today said Laval's talks with groups of senators and deputies indicated these three words would be the foundation of the new constitution.

Premier Petain was said to have been "tremendously impressed" by reconstruction plans for Spain mapped out by his old pupil, Generalissimo Francisco Franco, and that when discussing France's post-war problems with his aides, the aged marshal frequently declared:

"But we must have his ((Franco's) power."

Since Petain became head of the French government, upon the resignation of Premier Paul Reynaud, who refused to capitulate to Germany, the semi-Fascist Croix de Feu ("Cross of Fire") organization of Col. Francois de la Rocue had reportedly gained powerful influence among army, navy and air force officials.

War Guilt Resolution

Havas, French news agency, reported from Vichy that a large number of deputies had approved a war-guilt resolution.

The motion, which Havas said was assured of overwhelming support in Parliament, would ask immediate government identification and punishment of "all those politically, civilly or militarily responsible" for France's downfall.

Speaking at Vichy, Laval stressed his efforts to "keep France from excessive interference in British action."

"The disaster to which Leger (Alexis Leger, long permanent chief of the foreign ministry secretariat) and those who drew us into the war have brought us has given us a sacred duty above all to assure the future leadership of France," Laval declared.

vented her from closing their borders with China since their trade would be affected. As for Hongkong, it asserted that already trade between that colony and the Chinese hinterland had been halted.

Belief was expressed here that Britain's order for the removal of all British women and children from the Crown Colony of Hongkong indicated British determination to stand pat regardless of Japan's insistent demands.

At the same time Yakichiro Suma, Japanese foreign office spokesman, asserted that from the Japanese viewpoint, closing British Burma and French Indo-China to Chinese exports as well as imports would be a long step to speed successful conclusion of the war with China.

To a question on whether Japan would make demands on Russia, large source of Chinese war supplies, Suma said such a move was not being considered at the moment but "we regard it as a grave question."

British Attack AtOran Upheld By De Gaulle

Calls Episode 'Cruel' But Necessary; French Embassy Quits London

By the Associated Press

London, July 8.—Gen. Charles de Gaulle, head of the French National Committee at London, described today the British attack on the French fleet at Oran as a "particularly cruel episode," but told the French people that "it is better they should have been destroyed."

"Our enemies would have used our ships either against Britain or against the French Empire," he said in a broadcast over the British broadcasting system.

The French charge d'affaires informed the British foreign office today that the French Embassy in London was withdrawing to France.

This, apparently, indicated fulfillment of the French decision to break off diplomatic relations with Great Britain—as a result of Britain's action against the French fleet.

The communication delivered by the French charge, an authoritative diplomatic source said, called for an answer, and the British government "will certainly reply to it."

Non-Enemy Aliens

The home office promptly announced French citizens in Britain henceforth will be subject to the same restrictions as those applied to non-enemy aliens.

Declaring there was no reason to "gloss over" the feelings of "grief and anger" of all Frenchmen when they heard that units of the French fleet had been sunk by the British, de Gaulle said:

"Speaking to the British people, I ask them to spare us and spare themselves from any interpretation of this tragedy as a direct naval success.

". . . French ships at Oran were in fact incapable of fighting. They were at their moorings unable to maneuver or scatter . . . They gave to British ships the advantage of first salvos, which as everyone knows are decisive at sea at such short range, their destruction is not the result of a fight . . ."

Hood Reported Hit

[In the naval battle off Oran, the British sank one French battleship, heavily damaged and beached another — the Dunkerque — heavily damaged a third battleship, sank a seaplane carrier and burned two destroyers.

[Havas (French news agency) reported today the British cruiser Hood had been hit many times and that two British destroyers had been seriously damaged, perhaps sunk, during the battle with French naval units off Mers El-Kebir July 3.

The French aircraft carrier Commandant Teste is lying in a French port in complete safety, the Berlin radio anounced today in a report credited to the French government at Vichy.fl The crew was "completely unharmed" it added.]

De Gaulle said he would rather see "our beautiful—our beloved—our powerful" (battleship) Dunkerque aground at Oran than to see her one day manned by Germans shelling English ports, of Algiers, Casablanca or Dakar.

stations have been going silent during bombing attacks.

(Nine civilians who refused to go to shelters were reported killed this afternoon by British bombs dropped on Sliedrecht, 20 miles east of Rotterdam.)

The Royal Air Force reported it had bombed munitions factories near the Ludwigshaven railway yards in northern Germany Sunday night, and attacked the naval barracks and a series of airports at Wilhelmshaven.

British Raid Ostend

British coastal command planes followed up today with a raid on Ostend Harbor, reporting heavy damage was inflicted "almost before the Nazi defenses got into action."

A highly placed war office source said the British Expeditionary Force, which included men who fought in Norway, Flanders and France, and the home battalions had been brought to full strength and were being equipped speedily.

Neutral military sources estimated the regular army, including dominion and foreign divisions such as Polish troops, at between 600,000 and 700,000.

1,060,000 Volunteers Ready

The war office spokesman said 1,060,000 additional local defense volunteers were available for the defense of Britain.

He said a speed-up in registration was sending 7,000 men every day into the field army during the present seven-week period and that twice as many men had been called up in June and July as in May.

With all this, the war office declared:

"A great amount of work has been done on defenses, but we must take care not to become too defense minded. We must be ready to meet Germany anywhere."

Nine Divisions Re-formed

One staggering task of the war office that of re-forming the B. E. F.'s nine divisions, has been completed.

These division, now back at full strength (between 12,000 and 15,000 men each) are being equipped "in accordance with a prearranged program," but the war office official did not say that their equipment was entirely complete.

Divisions which were under training in Britain and which took no part in the campaigns abroad have been brought up to full strength, he added, and now are ready for use.

A spokesman for the home security ministry placed at 1,500,000 the number of men and women employed in full or part time in civil defense services.

3 More Children Will Go to Camp

Three more underprivileged District children are to receive the benefits of the District Tuberculosis Association's Health camp because of donations totaling $110, the association announced last night.

Although the Bald Eagle Hill Tuberculosis Camp has accommodations for 125 children in run-down physical condition, only 93 are now at the resort because of a lack of funds.

The waiting list of applicants to the camp exceeds now 150. About 90 children are at the camp, which opened July 5. Accommodations are available for 32 more children, and will be filled as soon as funds are available.

Control Of Aliens

In a recent radio address Solicitor General Biddle urged aliens to come forward promptly next September and register in accordance with the provisions of the Alien Registration Act recently passed by Congress.

Mr. Biddle pointed out that this law does not entail any change of policy in dealing with non-citizens. It is merely designed to establish stricter control over foreigners through a system of identification. Compulsory fingerprinting is a device for insuring the accuracy of the records, which are confidential. Mr. Biddle says that no one need fear that they will be used by employers for the purpose of blacklisting or discriminating against aliens.

The Solicitor General's reassuring remarks are in accord with the views expressed by President Roosevelt when he signed the Alien Registration Act and with those of Attorney General Jackson. In a recent address the latter stated that "while a stricter control of aliens is necessary to internal defense, any form of hateful treatment or repression is not only unnecessary, but would tend to make sullen enemies of those who wish to be good Americans."

However, the laudable efforts of the Federal authorities to gain the confidence of alien groups who support and uphold American institutions will be of little avail if State and local governments undertake to supplement the Federal program by setting up local systems of alien registration. The Department of Justice thinks that such local laws are probably unconstitutional. But leaving the question of constitutionality aside, unutterable confusion would certainly result if numerous local control systems were to be set up.

As Mr. Biddle stated in replying to an inquiry from the Governor of Tennessee: "It requires little imagination to anticipate that if Federal, State and local governments all enact statutes and ordinances requiring the registration of aliens and imposing other burdens upon them, not shared by citizens, these unfortunates will be subjected to constant harassment . . . tending to drive them farther and farther from embracing the principles for which this country has always stood."

Only the Federal Government is in a position to deal uniformly and effectively on a national basis with the 3,500,000 aliens scattered throughout the Nation. If the States wish to be genuinely helpful, therefore, they will heed the advice which the Solicitor General gave to the Governor of Tennessee and limit their activities in this field to cooperation with the Federal authorities.

Quibble And Quiddity

By a tremendous majority delegates to the sixth annual American Youth Congress at Lake Geneva, Wis., voted down a resolution that would have explicitly denounced the present governments of Germany, Italy, Spain, Japan and Soviet Russia. But by an equally vast majority the congress reaffirmed the position it adopted last year and again voiced its condemnation of all dictatorships, "Communist, Fascist, Nazi or any other type."

It is not to be expected, therefore, that stuffy and old-fashioned souls who cling stubbornly to the superstitions of logic and common sense, will be able to understand why such a fuss had been raised about the resolutions. They will be unable to perceive that the difference between the rejected formula and the accepted one represents anything more than the rankest quibble.

But it is high time for the rest of us to get rid of the outworn supposition that the primary function of words is to convey what is in the minds of those who speak and write them. Today an intelligent person who is confronted with any set of phrases dealing with almost any question of politics, war or sociology is prone to ask himself not what the phrases are intended to convey but what they are meant to conceal. It is, of course, no easy thing to answer such questions, and it is quite as likely to lead one as much into error and confusion as to accept the phrases at their ostensible value.

So we shall not even attempt to explain why the Communist delegates to the American Youth Congress are apparently as eager as anybody else to denounce dictatorships, even Communist dictatorship in principle, but are outraged by the thought of denouncing a Communist dictatorship in fact. Nor shall we attempt to explain why the leaders of the Youth Congress, who are still at such pains to insist that Communists form but a negligible portion of the total membership, remain so amazingly tender of Communist sensibilities.

It is possible, of course, that the Communists and their friends in the congress have been thoroughly hypnotized by their own words. They may genuinely believe, like so many of us, that you can change the nature of anything by merely changing its name. Now that Soviet Russia, by dictatorial fiat has become "the only true democracy" she is very, very good, but when she represented the dictatorship of the proletariat she was horrid.

Facing Famine

With western Europe facing a severe food shortage in the coming winter if the war continues and the British blockade of the continent holds, the Department of Agriculture estimates that world exportable wheat surpluses will amount to about 1,000,000,000 bushels during the coming year.

The United States also anticipates a record corn crop while Argentina has had a bumper corn crop this year, a large proportion of which would normally be shipped into the blockaded area to be fed to livestock. With a large unsalable carryover on hand, the Argentine government is said to be considering using it as fuel.

These instances of superabundance in a world where millions of people are deprived of the bare necessities of life are, of course, not peculiar to war periods. During the years of depression agricultural surpluses have perennially plagued our Department of Agriculture. Indeed, large sums have been paid out to finance the hoarding or systematic destruction of products that could have been used to feed and clothe destitute Americans.

War, however, creates conditions utterly different from those of peace time. Individuals living in war areas able to maintain contacts with sources of supply are not likely to starve for lack of money. Particularly is that the case under modern conditions of warfare, with entire nations mobilized and governments assuming responsibility for the provisioning and clothing of the people. But just as the modern war submerges the individual in the mass so do the methods of modern blockade warfare subject civilian populations to all the hardships of siege and create world-wide dislocations of trade and industry far beyond anything to be found in times of peace.

It is impossible, of course, to estimate with precision the extent of the food shortage in the occupied areas of Europe. On the one hand, food reserves had been accumulated in advance of invasion. On the other hand, the German advance has destroyed growing crops and reduced potential supplies. Normally, however, western Europe is heavily dependent upon imported food and feed for livestock. France had reached the point of being able at times to export some wheat. But as the result of the war, it is believed that she will need to import from 50,000,000 to 75,000,000 bushels of wheat this year.

While Germany is more nearly self-sufficient in respect to foodstuffs than the conquered areas to the west and north, crop prospects in southeastern Europe from which she draws additional supplies are said to be poor, and export surpluses may be abnormally small, in consequence.

Switzerland, dependent upon imports for over 50 per cent of her food requirements, is also hard hit by the entry of Italy into the war and the closing of the Mediterranean. Poland, ordinarily more than self-sufficient in respect to foodstuffs, has been devastated and has become a temporary economic liability rather than an asset in respect to food.

Much depends upon the way in which inadequate food supplies are apportioned by the German authorities in the subject areas. Food bureaus have already been set up in occupied French territory. With rigid rationing, shortages which might spell starvation may mean only severe undernourishment. Humanitarian considerations aside, Germany will doubtless do her utmost to keep the people of the occupied countries from starving for hungry people are dangerous and difficult to discipline and make very poor workers. But it is certain that Germany's conquests, while yielding her important war supplies have also presented her with a food problem of utmost gravity.

Tattoo And Taboo

Army recruiting officers have a new and delicate problem. Information at hand does not reveal just who started it, but the quality of tattooing on an applicant for enlistment affects his eligibility.

"Tattooing which is a bit too—well—which isn't just nice, is enough to bar an applicant," one pure-minded sergeant is quoted as saying.

In fairness to the public, especially to men who are thinking of offering their services to the Nation, the Army should publish a catalogue of the epidermic art which its recruiting sergeants consider "a bit too——."

Since the issue have been raised by officials unknown, it might be permissible to suggest a system of grading. On the basis of 100 as perfection, recruiting officers could be guided as follows:

Flag that ripples when arm is flexed—90 (extra good ripples, 95.) Entwined hearts, one labeled Mamie—minus 10. Circus lady—minus 30. Hula dancer on biceps—direct applicant to Quantico.

Sunday In Mexico

The widespread disorder and violence which accompanied Mexico's presidential election last Sunday are symptomatic of a disturbed situation in the neighboring republic and may have a dangerous aftermath in the days and weeks to come.

Judged by their past records, Gen. Manuel Avil Camacho and Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan, the two principal rivals for the presidency, share the same outlook and philosophy. Both profess undeviating loyalty to the principles of the Mexican revolution. Both have been warm supporters of the Cardenas regime. Both, incidentally, have denounced totalitarianism and have come out for increased cooperation with the United States. Indeed, the two men were and presumably still are close personal friends.

The choice which faced the voters of Mexico last Sunday was thus, outwardly at least, one between Tweedledee and Tweedledum. Actually nothing could be further from the truth. For behind each of the principal candidates are mobilized forces violently in opposition and which, unless kept in leash, may produce a state of turmoil in Mexico of which Sunday's flare-up was possibly only a foretaste.

There is only one permanently organized party in Mexico, the Party of the Mexican Revolution or P. R. M. That party has for years controlled the government, the army and the election machinery. Its present leader is President Cardenas, who more than any other Mexican chief executive of the last quarter century has tried to carry out the social reforms embodied in the Constitution of 1917. His candidate is Gen. Camacho who has been supported as well by the radical Confederation of Mexican Workers and the National Peasant Confederation.

In contrast, Gen. Almazan has won the support of all the elements that are discontented with the results of the drastic reforms carried out by Cardenas and which, they insist, have brought Mexico to the verge of ruin. Despite their common loyalties, therefore, Gens. Camacho and Almazan have come to represent two conflicting points of view.

This in itself would constitute no more danger to Mexico's internal stability than differences between Democrats and Republicans constitute a danger to the internal stability of the United States. But, as it happens, the cleavage in Mexico, between the radical elements behind the Cardenas regime, and the conservative forces which have rallied to Gen. Almazan's standard has tended to widen to the point where the losing side may be unwilling peacefully to accept the results of last Sunday's balloting.

In view of the P. R. M.'s past stranglehold on Mexico's political machinery, the likelihood is that when the ballots are counted Gen. Camacho will prove to be the victor. An uprising by the supporters of Gen. Almazan may follow. And the reverse may be true if the unexpected happens and Almazan's vote tops that of his rival. The fact that a considerable number of trade union members belonging to the P. R. M. have been receiving military training, although thus far without guns, suggests that the loyalty of the whole of the army to the present regime and the regime's candidate for the Presidency is not entirely certain.

The Satko Saga

From the Buffalo Evening News.

To transport seven children safely and successfully even for a short distance is no small accomplishment. To take a family of that size over a long journey by land and sea, as Paul Satko has just done, is an achievement of heroic proportions.

Satko, an unemployed welder, set out in the spring from Virginia with his family in his car and a home-made boat in a trailer. He planned to go to the Pacific Coast and proceed thence by boat to Alaska. Although some Seattle citizens tried to stop the project with a court injunction, the intrepid welder departed before the order could be served and he has now reached his destination.

Alaskans greeted him with the admiration he deserved and they expressed disdain for the citizens in the States who had tried to stop him. One observed:

"Those fellows out there must be losing their punch. They ought to remember '98."

He was referring, of course, to the year of the great Klondike gold rush. That was the year when the news of George Carmack's discovery of gold on Bonanza Creek created excitement that spread throughout the country. Thousands joined the rush and endured hardships going over the Chilkoot and White passes and down the Yukon. It took courage and determination to get through. Satko's journey was made under different circumstances, but it shows that those qualities still exist.

It may be hoped that Satko will presently be able to establish himself and his family in a new home. They have given a demonstration of the hardy pioneering spirit at a time when many are easily discouraged.

Defense Measure

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The following points are offered for consideration:

1. The mistake of the democracies—relying on long-range plans while neglecting immediate measures; drawing pictures of the new boat while water rises through the hole in the bottom of the old boat; making plans for the solid oak front door while the intruder prepares to crash the back door screen.

2. Short weeks may find us in need of an army in the field ready to counter a lightning stroke, an army ready to move, not assembling—200,000 on the East Coast, 200,000 on the West Coast, and a striking force ready for prompt embarkation for any threatened point to the south of us. That's the setup that will give pause to aggression.

3. Elaborate training plans which won't bear fruit for several years won't do it. It won't be done by paltry increments to a largely special detachment of Regular Army, much of whose strength is still frittered away at "pork barrel" Army posts. It won't be done by an "hour-a-week" National Guard.

4. A professional army—an assembled force of 200,000 on the East Coast, 200,000 on the West Coast, and 100,000 in a southward striking force—training, training, working together from sunup to sundown, with attention to detail like that of a Notre Dame football team. A slow-witted general would be benched as promptly as a heavy-footed halfback.

5. How to accomplish this? The only immediate means—mobilize the National Guard. Put it in the field, eliminate the dead wood. Calling out the National Guard when the enemy starts to move would be like sending a Sunday afternoon scrub team against the Chicago Bears.

6. Not enough equipment? Trained, disciplined men, half equipped, are better than those both half equipped and untrained. Hardship on the National Guard who fear loss of jobs or statesmen votes? The French have lost something more.

7. Mobilize the National Guard until regular forces are available for its replacement or there exists no longer danger of a lightning stroke. Mobilize the National Guard.

Narrow Atlantic

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The burning of the White House by the British is an historical fact. The Atlantic Ocean at that time was just as blue, just as deep and just as wide as it is today, yet the enemy navigated himself safely to our shores, marched into the Capital of the Nation and there set fire to the Executive Mansion.

Things do happen here in America despite that phrase, "It can't happen here."

Travelers In Canada

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Because a large number of citizens of the United States are intending to visit Canada this summer, and because some persons have been mistakenly informed that there may be difficulties placed in the way of citizens coming back over our border, your readers may be interested in the following specific information obtained from the State Department in Washington, in response to my inquiry. Mrs. R. B. Shipley, chief of the Passport Division, telegraphed me as follows:

"While passports are not now required American citizens for entry into or return from Canada, the department suggests Americans carry some documents of identification such as old passports, birth or baptismal certificates, naturalization certificates, club cards, tax bills or similar papers."

I need hardly add that all my friends in Canada and various officials there assure me that citizens of the United States will be welcome to the Dominion and everything done to make their stay as pleasant as possible.

Gladstone And Willkie

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Opponents of Gladstone in the British Parliament assailed him for inconsistency. They declared that in one of his speeches he took a position different from that of a more recent time. To the taunt, Gladstone said:

"I will speak what I believe today, even though it contradicts everything I said yesterday."

Such a statement is evidence of a progressive mind; truth cannot be bound with fetters, either of mind or body.

The fact that Mr. Willkie changed his political affiliation is greatly to his credit. It is evidence he is possessed of a mind that seeks facts, and when facts come to him, he accepts them.

Mr. Willkie is a free man, and as such is in line to become the chief servant of a free people.

"Delicate Balance"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your editorial of July 6, "Pointing His Own Moral," you make statements concerning President Roosevelt with which I wish to take issue:

1. "Yesterday, at Hyde Park, the President waxed eloquent in defense of that delicate balance between executive, legislative and judiciary which three years ago he was extremely anxious to destroy."

To this I wish to say that there are many of us who believe that what the President proposed at that time was entirely in keeping with this "delicate balance." Had not the Supreme Court by its own action restored this "delicate balance" by methods with which you are well familiar the court would have been unpacked and the "delicate balance" restored by the passage of the President's court bill.

2. "In 1937 he thought men of 70 too old for service on the bench. His own nominee for Secretary of War . . . will be 73 in September."

I never heard anyone say at any time that all men over 70 were too old for service on the bench or anywhere else. Senility is something that sometimes happens and if it happens on the Supreme Court bench there is at present no effective method of counteracting it. In appointive or elective capacities where a person is subject to recall or reelection an older person is running on his own current mentality and vigor and not what he was 20, 30 or 40 years ago when he was appointed to the, shall we say, the Supreme Court.

3. You say that many Americans would characterize a third term attempt as dangerous and unwholesome.

It is no more dangerous and unwholesome to let the American people vote for or against Roosevelt for a third term than democracy is dangerous and unwholesome itself. The sooner those who oppose the New Deal say so and not hide behind a third-term issue, the more effective democracy will be.

Tank Stoppers

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The mass attacks by heavy tanks and motorized transports and artillery equipment, as carried out in France, challenge an answer. An answer must be found. I wish to propose the following suggestions for the careful consideration of explosive technicians and military tacticians, but the idea is as far as I alone can go.

Mine a strip of land with two sets of explosive units. The larger tank stoppers should each contain 10 or 12 pounds of high explosives which will explode if a heavy load passes over them. The smaller man stoppers should each contain about an ounce of explosive. These will explode if a man steps on them. Place these units so that each protects the other and prevents the other from premature removal or destruction.

With these units, mine a strip of land over which the enemy must pass. This strip may be 2,000 feet wide. Cover this strip with large units spaced 25 feet apart, each way, so staggered that motorized equipment could not pass over the strip without striking one of them. Protect these tank stoppers with man stoppers, 100 man stoppers scattered around each tank stopper.

Their protection of each other lies in the fact that the small units cannot be harmlessly exploded by running a heavy roller over them because the large units would blow the heavy equipment out of commission, while the small units would prevent the removal of the larger ones by hand.

This method could only be used for defensive purposes and under no circumstances by an aggressor. I am offering these suggestions in the hope that those better informed along these lines, will consider the above and perfect a means of putting an end to such barbarous mass tank rushes as were carried out so successfully in France.

Value Of Debate

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I, a constant reader of your paper, wish to contribute a few words for your readers' columns. The headline in this morning's Post to the effect that the Monroe Doctrine is not debatable is puzzling, to say the least.

I cannot believe that such a title is a truthful implication of Secretary Hull's attitude. Why it is contrary to the very principles which have been heralded by our politicians, press and radio: that war—the slaughter of human beings—could be avoided if the heads of nations would calmly discuss questions or possible controversies. Any question is debatable. Can any of your editorial writers or readers intelligently answer this statement?

EDISON L. FORD.

Compulsory Training

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Roosevelt likes very much the idea of universal, compulsory military training. Yes, he has the unbridled effrontery to tell all American mothers that henceforth their sons should be coerced into grandiose goose-stepping. Compulsory military training is the mother of tyranny; it is a flagrant reversal of our traditional political philosophy that the Government belongs to the people. The President is determined to "out-Hitler" Hitler.

Roosevelt, by cordially inviting the English government to take refuge in Canada, apologizes for the American Revolution, defames the Declaration of Independence and disavows the Monroe Doctrine.

The Post Impressionist

Landlady

"I have a room on the second floor next the bath," the landlady told me. "It's only six a week."

"Haven't you anything cheaper?" I asked, not very hopefully. Six dollars was quite reasonable for Washington. I had just arrived, and my room at the hotel was $2 a day.

"Well, there's a little attic room for four, but I don't think you'd like it."

"May I see it?"

The landlady's good-natured face assumed a temporarily strict expression. "You don't entertain men in your room, do you?"

"I should say not. I read and study at night, and I want a room in this neighborhood to be near the library."

"No harm intended. I didn't think you was that type. Here, dearie, you take the key and go on up. I'm a little bit heavy to be climbing when I don't have to. Just keep going till you get to the top."

My legs were weak after three flights of stairs, and when I looked in the room my courage weakened, too. It was about the size of the bathroom at home. A narrow alley leading to a porthole of a window was lined on each side with the furniture. Sitting on the cot I could touch practically everything in the room. Remembering the big house and yard that used to be "home," I came near crying for the first time. But there was a tiny sink with running hot and cold water, and a concealed gas plate—at only $4 a week. I could cook at home, carry my lunches, save on carfare and laundry, and have quiet and privacy to work on my book. I had to get out of the hotel, and this would have to do until I could find something better. I took it.

My days were pretty much alike. After work I walked home, prepared and ate supper, washed up my dishes and went to the library a block away until 9 for research work on the historical background of my book. Some day, when I had paid Aunt Evelyn the transportation money she advanced me when I got my call to come to Washington, I would rent or buy a typewriter and start the first typed draft of my manuscript. In the meantime, my penciled notes were kept in a pasteboard box under the side table, segregated in old discarded office envelopes and folders. About 10:30 each night I stopped work to do my personal laundry and prepare for bed. Sometimes I worked too late and the next day it was hard to get up, so I learned to allow myself that luxury only on Saturday nights, then often scribbling until 1 or 2.

The shop windows began to fill with pretty spring clothes, but I held out against temptation. My three-piece suit was nice, and warm enough on cold days when I wore both jacket and coat. My two blouses were of good quality, easily laundered. My hat, bag, gloves and shoes were suitable and becoming, and I had "two of everything," for underneath. So with constant care nothing had to be replenished but hose, and shoes occasionally half-soled.

At times I felt elated because I was sticking so closely to budget and schedule. Of course, I wouldn't want to live like that forever, without physical comforts or recreation or friends, but I was proving to myself that I "could take it." The vista ahead was bright—the completion of my book, the payment of obligations, the purchase of a typewriter with which to work out my own freedom, all to be achieved by my own steadfast efforts. Get on with the book!

The day came when Aunt Evelyn was paid in full. She had told me there was no hurry, but I knew things were not too easy for her.

The next pay day I stopped at a second-hand typewriter store and rented a small portable, the rent money to apply on the purchase price if I decided to keep it. I bought inexpensive paper for the first draft of my book. Bond and carbons could wait. The typing and revision would take at least a month.

Full of plans and impatient to begin typing, I forgot my weariness and almost ran up the three flights of stairs to my room. When I opened the door, I nearly dropped the typewriter. Watermelon pink voile curtains with fat ruffles hung beside my little window. A bedspread to match, with a deep ruffle, adorned the cot and a strip of bright rose carpet hid the linoleum. On the table, now wearing a new pink skirt, stood a little lamp with a pink shade. On the wall twin pictures, Cupid Awake and Cupid Asleep!

I was almost paralyzed, but a sudden premonition made me dart to the table and lift its new skirt. A flowered wastebasket with a ribbon bow, pink, stood beneath. The pasteboard box containing my story was not there. I looked under the bed. Just my suitcase, as before; on the wardrobe, my books, and inside, on the floor, my bedroom slippers. There was no place else to look. Frantically I catapulted down the stairs. Mrs. Terry came out of her room, beaming.

"There you are, Lovey. How did you like the nice surprise? You are one of the best roomers I ever had and I wanted you to feel at home, so I fixed your room up like you was my own girl. I made the curtains and things myself, and if I do say so I think they're right pretty. I copied them from a movie. I cleaned up thoroughly and gave you a nice new wastebasket and burned that old box of trash."

Preparations Against Invasion

Dublin.

IN THE DUBLIN bars they still joke about being neutral against everybody—Germany, England and the I. R. A. But the joke now is forced and weak, for the news of the last few days has taken the smiles off Dublin faces and made everyone realize that invasion has come near to them.

Clear-cut evidence of recent contacts between the I. R. A. and Germany, where Sean Russell still finds asylum, has greatly increased the tension.

Around the Dail and the government offices you get the impression of a country already at war. Every gate and door leading from the streets is locked and guarded by armed men. There are barbed wire fences and sand bags, and at sunset an extra armed guard marches in to do night duty in the Dail.

ALMOST ALL the airports in the country have been spiked with railway sleepers driven into the ground in such quantities that no airplane could land or take off. Only the chief military air stations have been spared this spiking, while at Collinstown, the civil airport near Dublin, the prevailing wind runway has been left free for use.

Some of the golf courses are also being spiked, and other open spaces, including parts of Phoenix Park, where the avenues the other day were lined with barricades of timber and barbed wire, ready to be put into position as circumstances demand.

A ring of antiaircraft guns surrounds the capital. Searchlight practice has been intensified since unidentified aircraft (believed to be American airplanes flying to England) have been heard at night. A. R. P. is being speeded up, for Ireland only has a half million gas masks, few shelters and an inadequate organization.

Sentries at road posts fire at cars that ignore challenges. The day and night watch for invaders by sea or air is being intensified by the recruitment of a local security scheme similar to British observer corps. More military equipment, including airplanes and vehicles for motorized units, is being purchased, and there is a real national unity behind the drive for a greatly increased army.

Power stations, broadcasting stations and similar buildings of importance are thoroughly guarded following an incident which revealed that at least one of them could have been put out of action in a crisis.

AGAINST WHOM are these preparations being made? Primarily against Germany-cum I. R. A., but many Irishmen include England (it is always England, never Britain) among the potential enemies. There is a real fear which some of the Irish leaders foster that Britain may seize the excuse to send armed forces into Ireland to prevent Germany landing there. That, they say, would bring back the 1921 war.

It is doubtful if that fear is as real to Mr. de Valera and his government as they try to make out in their speeches and broadcasts. For, after all, they have had consultations—some say staff talks—with Britain on the invasion danger, and it is largely with British equipment that Ireland's defense expansion is being pushed.

These are hardly the relations one has with a potential enemy. The fact is that no Irish leader wants to be known to history as the man who in any circumstances invited or permitted the British armed forces to return to Ireland. The feeling will persist until a danger from outside appears to the Irishman as even greater than the partition menace, which is still iron in his heart and soul.

ONE OF THE leading men in Dublin, and a member of the Dail, summed the position up:

"Many Irishmen believe that if there is a landing by air or sea they can hold and defeat it. In guerilla warfare they will be excellent and they have practically the whole countryside behind them. But we have no tanks, few antiaircraft guns, an air force negligible by modern standards and a navy that consists of one English-built motor torpedo boat and two fishery protection vessels.

"If after a day or two the invaders are still on our soil, Ireland will accept England's aid, partition or no partition. In his heart every Irishman knows that England is fighting for everything we stand for, and every Irishman is fighting in his mind a battle between his historic attitude toward England and this vile thing.

"Ideologically 95 per cent of this country is with the Allies. The German legation staff is virtually ostracized by Dublin."

MANY IRISHMEN are surprised that the British in their present crisis have not asked for the use of the former Irish naval bases—Cobh, Berehaven and Lough Swilly. They were just as surprised when England handed them back in 1938 to Ireland's invisible navy under the terms of a treaty that had already been whittled away by the Irish government.

The position today is that Ireland could not exist without England. Britain takes 90 per cent of her exports and provides about 60 per cent of her imports. British shipping keeps her alive. It brings her the bulk of her wheat and nearly all of her coal and gasoline.

Yet in the efforts to keep that shipping at sea the British are deprived of the use of invaluable bases which now serve Irish motor torpedo boats pending the time when England builds several more for her.

Even the Irish realize that a time may come when it will be in Ireland's own interest to have British antisubmarine flotillas in the three ports.

Thus far there has been practically no contact between U-boats and the Irish coasts. Stories of submarines refueling in lonely bays in the south and west and officers going ashore to buy food and make contact with the I. R. A. can be almost entirely discounted.

U-boats have been seen off the coast, sometimes well within territorial waters. They come in after days of Atlantic patrol to check their dead reckoning with a bearing on the coast and take the opportunity to have a breather on the surface while they move slowly along the coast out to sea again. But, with the exception of a submarine which months ago landed a Greek crew from a torpedoed ship there seems no authenticated case of U-boats touching the Irish coast.

There can be little secrecy in that part of the country. It is so well patroled by eager land and coast watchers that it has become—as one watcher put it to me—a vast sounding board where every note gets back to headquarters quickly.

THE COAST WATCH, indeed, is much better than it was under British administration in the last war. Irishmen feel that they are working for their own safety now.

Ireland's neutrality and her drive to increase her own fighting force has not prevented thousands of Irishmen from the Free State enlisting in the British army. Many of them enlist in Belfast, traveling north on 5-shilling excursion trains which always arrive in Dublin half empty.

When they come back on leave Ireland's neutrality prevents them coming in British uniform. The men change clothes in depots on the way to Holyhead; officers either change on board or walk off the steamer at Dun Loaghaire with a sporting jacket over their uniform while watching policemen turn a blind eye.

I saw one officer come off a boat without any effort to hide his uniform. A policeman, pleasantly, half apologetically, but firmly, said he could not come ashore like that. There was an argument which ended when the officer spoke about coming through the hell of Dunkirk and then being refused entry to his own country.

"Dunkirk?" echoed the policeman. "Sure, I had a brother there myself. Off you go." And the officer drove off in a taxi.

Most Irishmen who are not too much blinded by past troubles and present partition believe that Mr. de Valera's government will follow the example of the policeman and let in military aid if it should be required.

Fight Over Stimson

By John B. Oakes

Senators Debate

PRESIDENT Roosevelt's appointment of Col. Henry L. Stimson as Secretary of War was defended on grounds of national unity and was attacked as a step toward war in the Senate yesterday.

Confirmation of Col. Stimson, former Secretary of War and State in Republican cabinets, had been expected yesterday, but final action had to be deferred when Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, held the floor for the latter half of the afternoon with a speech on the subject of aliens.

The nomination of Col. Frank Knox as Secretary of the Navy will come up after the Senate has disposed of Col. Stimson. Both appointments are considered certain of approval.

THROUGH his nomination of Col. Stimson to the Democratic cabinet, President Roosevelt has served notice to the world "of the fundamental unity of the American people," declared Chairman Sheppard of the Military Affairs Committee, which last week indorsed the appointment.

However, a severe attack on the nomination was launched by Senators Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, and Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia. Other opponents, including Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, and Taft (Republican), of Ohio, are expected to speak today.

Basing his argument on a speech Col. Stimson made June 18, the day before the appointment was announced, Senator Vandenberg charged that policies advocated by Col. Stimson would threaten to bring this country into war "immediately."

VANDENBERG particularly attacked Stimson's advocacy of throwing American ports open to British and French naval vessels for repairs and refueling, and his willingness to see munitions transported to Great Britain in American ships under convoy.

To permit British naval vessels to use American ports would be "a direct invitation" to bring the war to this country, Senator Vandenberg asserted, as an unusually large crowd of visitors packed the Senate galleries.

"We would join the belligerents then and there," roared the Michigander. Under the Stimson policy, "the battle of Oran could have been fought in New York harbor," he said.

AND AS FOR sending American munitions ships to England, "I can think of nothing more flagrantly provocative," asserted Senator Vandenberg, pointing out an apparent divergence of views between Col. Stimson and Col. Knox on the dangers of such action.

Col. Stimson "does not shun methods that take us into war; indeed, he asks for them immediately," said Vandenberg, a recent candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination.

Admitting that it is "clearly to our self-interest" that England remain as an opponent of Germany until the United States is better prepared, Senator Vandenberg argued that Col. Stimson's policies would "precipitate rather than postpone" American involvement.

"America is establishing a war Cabinet," charged Senator Holt in a speech reviewing Col. Stimson's record of "involvement and intervention."

DECLARING that Col. Stimson has been an "Anglo-maniac" for 25 years, the lame-duck West Virginian asserted that confirmation would be "an attack against the peace and welfare of America."

Secretary of War Woodring was "fired" by President Roosevelt because "he would not take orders," said Senator Holt, claiming that Woodring was unsatisfactory to the Administration because he wanted to help the Allies only "within the law."

Recalling that during the fight over the Supreme Court, President Roosevelt had set 70 as the desirable age limit, Senator Holt pointed out that Col. Stimson is 73.

Senator Holt attacked Col. Stimson's alleged advocacy of sending men to Europe prior to America's entrance into the last war, and denounced his connection with the Nicaraguan intervention of 1927 as a "black mark" on American history.

To Tell "Plenty," Says Woodring

Topeka, Kans., July 8 (INS).—Harry H. Woodring, recently resigned Secretary of War, will not "tell all" but will have "plenty to say" when he speaks tomorrow night before the Topeka Chamber of Commerce.

The former Secretary, who has been quoted as predicting that he would be forced to resign because he opposed "stripping our defenses to aid the Allies," said today:

"There is nothing to the report that I plan to 'tell all,' but I am still a strong noninterventionist, and will say so in my speech tomorrow night."

Democracy At Bay

By Mark Sullivan

Spread Of Totalitarianism

BEFORE THE FOURTH of July passes out of public consciousness, the occasion must be used to make the American people aware of some history, our own and world history. Understanding of this segment of history is the foundation for understanding of the most important present concern of our country, the portentous problem already faced by our Government and soon to be faced by every individual.

July 4, 1776 (and in events that followed during some 13 years) there was set up on the soil of North America an entirely new conception of society and government. It was a government composed of representatives of the people, democratically chosen. It is called democracy, and that term, while not exact, is sufficiently convenient. It was, when founded, a thing utterly new in the world. (To this statement there are immaterial exceptions, Switzerland, and the comparatively brief democratic experiments in Greece and Rome.)

We had the newest form of government in the world, and we thought we had the best, the latest and best model. At first, the world looked upon it as a novelty. Then the world began to imitate it. Country after country adopted our model. For nearly a century and a half, the history of government throughout the world was a history of movement toward the American model—the discarding of monarchy, or the limitation of it, and the adoption, in part or whole, of the American system. During the early part of the last century, practically all South and Central America, discarded the monarchial rule of Spain, set up democratic republics in direct imitation of ours. In the 1870's France, discarding the last of the Bonapartes, set up a form of government largely inspired by ours. In the 1880's, the remaining fragment of monarchy in South America, Brazil, got rid of its emperor and became completely a democratic republic faithfully modeled on our Constitution. In the early part of the present century China, discarding its ancient dynasty, moved in the direction of democracy. During the Great War, monarchy after monarchy in Europe fell—Germany, Austria, Russia—to be succeeded by one form or another of democracy.

THUS FOR 141 years, from July 4, 1776, until February, 1917, the course of government throughout the world had consisted of the discarding of older forms and the adoption, in part or whole, of the American form. By the latter date, February, 1917, an immense preponderance of the world's area and population had adopted one variation or another of the system we devised.

Then, in November, 1917, something new came into the world. In Russia a small group of men, mainly Lenin and Trotsky, overthrew the short-lived democracy that had followed the regime of the czars. In its stead, they set up a form of society and government which they called communism. It was a merging into government of all the concerns of man and society. It was totalitarian government.

There was now a new model in the world. We, and most of the rest of the world, complacently thought it would be of brief life. But it spread.

In 1922 a variation of it called fascism was set up in Italy. In 1932, a variation called nazism was set up in Germany. In 1939, the Nazi-Fascist variation was set up in Spain. During the past ten months, Germany, by armed conquest, has imposed totalitarian government on Poland, Norway, Denmark, Belgium, Holland, France. These 23 years since 1917 have seen a constant retreat of democracy, constant spread of the new model. Democracy, after spreading for 141 years, has now for 23 years been in retreat.

TODAY, totalitarian government occupies half of Asia and substantially all Europe. Such tiny islands of democracy as remain, such as Switzerland, do not know from one day until the next whether they can survive. From the Pacific Coast of Asia all the way to the Atlantic Coast of Europe, totalitarian government is supreme.

On the entire western shortline of Europe, from the Arctic Circle to the Mediterranean, totalitarian government is poised for further conquest, further progress westward. Within a few days, it is expected to leap upon England. If successful there, it will leap the Atlantic, to us. Perhaps first to South America, but ultimately to us.

Its spread is not by arms alone. The different forms of totalitarian government have at various times practiced both military conquest and infiltration by ideas. Communism, at first, after 1917, contemplated conquest of the world by force. Later, for several years, communism abandoned force, used propaganda, secret agents, set up branch organizations.

Nazism practices simultaneous expansion by military conquest and by propaganda and infiltration. In most of the countries conquered by force, the way is prepared by previous propaganda and infiltration.

Historical Contrast

(The scene is Independence Hall, Philadelphia. The time is 1776, but the delegates are modern politicians.)

First Delegate (reading the proposed Declaration aloud)—When in the course of human events it becomes necessary . . .

Second Delegate—I don't like that word "necessary." It's pretty strong.

First Delegate (continuing)—For one people to dissolve the political bonds which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation . . .

Third Delegate—We ought to think that over more carefully. If we go into all the causes it may get us into trouble.

Fourth Delegate—This calls for caution. Why can't we put out some feelers first to see what the public wants. It's all pretty risky, if you ask me.

First Delegate (resuming)—We hold these truths to be self-evident—that all men are created equal . . .

Second Delegate—Is it expedient to go that far at this moment?

(Cries of "No" and "Take it easy!")

First Delegate (continuing)—That they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness . . .

(Cries of "Wait a minute." "We want peace" and "Don't rush us into war.")

Third Delegate—I think we should cut the life and liberty stuff and just let it go that we are entitled to the pursuit of happiness. It don't sound so defiant.

First Delegate (resuming)—That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed; that, whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it.

(Cries of "That means war!" "Let well enough alone" and "It's a capitalistic plot!")

Fourth Delegate—I move to drop that word "abolish." It's too strong.

Sixth Delegate—But we propose to abolish the British rule, do we not?

Fourth Delegate—Yes, but we should be more tactful.

First Delegate (resuming)—But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same object, evinces a design to reduce them under absolute despotism . . .

Fifth Delegate—That's too strong. How do we know the people will support such language? We should draw this up al; over again and be a little vague. Otherwise we may have to fight.

(There is a lapse of 20 minutes, during which the Declaration is read over, despite much bickering.)

First Delegate (reaching the end)—We, therefore, solemnly publish and declare that the United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent states; that they are absolved from all allegiance to the British crown and that all political connections between them and the state of Great Britain is, and ought to be, totally dissolved.

(Cries of "No!", "We are for peace and prosperity!", "This will drag us into war!" etc.)

Fifth Delegate—I'll not sign it. I must sound out my constituents first.

Sixth Delegate—I move we put the whole thing over until AFTER A GALLUP POLL!

(Curtain with a dull thud.)

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Campaign Issue

THERE IS BUT one question to be decided in the Presidential campaign: who can be counted upon to organize the more effectively the military and economic defenses of the United States? Long before the election returns are in, and long before the next Administration can take the oath of office, all the other issues which are now mentioned will either have been settled, or they will have ceased to have any meaning, or they will seem entirely unimportant.

But the need to organize American resources for war and for peace will be transcendent and imperative and obvious. Candidates, parties, campaign pledges, policies will necessarily be judged by this criterion, and any other issue may be dismissed as a political red herring. Thus all that is remembered of what was said and done at Philadelphia is that Wendell Willkie was nominated; the platform is so completely forgotten already that no one has mentioned it. The Chicago convention next week will have a similar experience: all that will remain after the convention adjourns will be its candidate, and all that will interest the voters is whether he or Mr. Willkie is the more likely to organize successfully the energies and the resources of America.

THERE ARE EVEN greater and more critical questions before the people. But these questions will be decided before the next Administration takes office. There is the supreme question, which will affect the whole future of this country and of this hemisphere, as to whether Britain can resist successfully, what the United States can and will do to strengthen the British resistance, and what measures it will take and arrangements it can come to for making certain that the whole of the British fleet and all the strategic outposts in the Atlantic and the Pacific are not lost and then turned against us. These questions will have to be met during the election campaign itself, and decisions which are absolutely vital decisions will have to be taken by this Administration in consultation with Mr. Willkie. Both nominees will have to take a position on these critical issues knowing that the issues will almost certainly be decided long before the votes can be counted.

These issues are intrinsically above all partisanship and because they will be decided before the election they could not, even if the candidates were so disposed, be dealt with on partisan grounds.

THERE ARE ALSO issues which have been important in the past but are no longer relevant. There are, for example, the Hull treaties which belong to an era when freedom of enterprise was the general rule among the large industrial states. If the totalitarian victory in Europe and Asia is consolidated, and as long as so much of Europe and Asia is totalitarian, freedom of enterprise and of commercial exchange is impossible. It will have to be replaced by the organization of export and import cartels under government control. But if the Hull treaties are inapplicable, so also is the Republican conception of the tariff. For the protection of industry and agriculture and labor, though now necessary in a sense that it was never before so necessary, can no longer be had by customs tariffs alone. It can be had only by the organized control of exports and imports and of foreign exchange.

Other issues which have divided the parties will have become equally irrelevant. It is, for example, meaningless now to argue about whether we shall undertake public works in order to prime the pump or in order to provide employment which private industry does not provide. For we are undertaking the most gigantic public works program in our whole history. But the public works are armaments. And they are being constructed not to prime the pump and make work for the unemployed but in order to obtain ships, planes, guns and tanks out of the plants and labor, employed and unemployed, which the country possesses. It is no longer a question of whether the government shall stimulate private industry or compete with it but of the government's obtaining from industry a great navy and air force and an army.

OTHER ISSUES will have become quite unimportant. A nation which is seriously arming itself in the modern world will certainly have no further use for those measures of the New Deal which restrict production for the purpose of making work and inflate purchasing power for the purpose of increasing private expenditures. The nation will need instead measures to increase the productivity of labor and to restrict civilian consumption which competes with the needs of armaments. But by the same token a nation which is seriously arming cannot be interested in the old Republican idea of unregulated and undirected private enterprise. To prepare for war is to organize and direct industry and investment for the national purposes, and not to let them be managed for private profit.

Both parties will, therefore, find that their old principles and slogans have become obsolete, and that the task of organizing this nation in a world of armed totalitarian states will call for a rapid and a radical revaluation and readaptation of their mental habits.

Inquiry Into Hours Of DistrictBuilding Guards Sought

The District Commissioners were requested to investigate hours and working conditions of guards in the District Building at a meeting of the Southeast Business Men's Association held at 314 Pennsylvania avenue southeast last night.

Elimination of trash burning and dumping at the end of East Capitol street was requested by the association. Plans were discussed for the twelfth annual outing of the organization to be held at Marshall Hall July 21.

It was announced that special boats will leave from the Wilson Line dock at 9:30 a. m. and 2 p. m. on the day of the outing.

Mrs. Gompers Works As C. I. O. Organizer

New York, July 8 (AP).—The United Retail and Wholesale Employes of America (C.I.O.) announced today that Mrs. Samuel Gompers, widow of the longtime president of the American Federation of Labor, was working as an organizer for the union.

She married Gompers in 1921; he died in 1924.

Panama Mine Zone Extended

Cristobal, Canal Zone, July 8 (AP). An extension of the live mine field sowed by the United States at both terminals of the Panama Canal Zone was reported today. Canal Zone authorities are taking extraordinary precautions for the safety of merchant shipping bound toward the Canal.

Special details of pilots are meeting incoming ships at a considerable distance outside the harbors, it was learned from unofficial sources. However, authorities said the waters are perfectly safe to merchantmen as long as instructions are obeyed.

Slot Machines Force Record Yield by Mint

Slot machines forced the United States mints to record production in the last 12 months. Nellie Taylor Ross, Director of the Mint, reported yesterday that 768,093,000 coins with a face value of $39,994,000 were turned out in the last fiscal year by the Philadelphia, Denver and San Francisco Mints. This was more than double the preceding year's output.

Pointing out that the records were made in production of pennies, nickels and dimes, Mrs. Ross said the "unusually high demand for coins" was due primarily to "the increasing use of coin-vending machines as well as other devices operated by coins."

Court to Decide Whether Elixir Is Good as Claimed

"The interesting story of what makes you feel good" will be heard, without music, in the District Court on July 23. If, after the hearing, the presiding justice does not feel good, the distributors of a patent medicine are going to be short 180 dozen bottles of their product.

Circulars for the product imply that it is good for what ails you. But District Attorney Edward M. Curran and Assistant District Attorney John Jackson told the court the medicine was only medical salts given a fancy name and mixed with tiny proportions of other common drugs and flavoring, including cooking soda, saccharine and oil of cloves.

Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue ordered a hearing July 23.

Activities Boost Steel, Woolen Mill Industrial Index

Industrial production swung sharply upward during May and the first half of June, the Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday.

Its seasonally adjusted index rose three points, to 105, in May, due chiefly to increased activity of steel and woolen mills.

Prices did not follow the production trend, however, fluctuating near the low levels reached after a sharp decline in mid-May. Consumer purchasing of commodities was about the same as earlier in the year, the board said.

The Reserve Board said that private residential contracts were at the highest level in 10 years, factory construction was well above a year ago, department store sales increased considerably in June, after a May decline, freight traffic was higher and nondurable manufactures actively generally showed little change from April to May.

Capital Chosen By Star-Gazers For 1941 Sessions

Next year's national convention of amateur astronomers will be held in Washington, it was announced last night by Stephen Nagy, president of the National Capital Amateur Astronomers Association, on his return from the 1940 convention in Pittsburgh.

Nagy, whose motion that next year's conclave be held here was adopted, said 300 or more part-time scientists probably would attend. It will be held about July 4, he said, probably at the Carnegie Institution.

Americans Form Unit in England

London, July 8 (AP).—Prof. Arthur Newell, of Boston, lecturer on international politics who is now in London, tonight announced the formation of an organization of Americans in England to aid Britain "with all support of which the American Nation is capable—short of nothing."

Newell said the organization—the "Americans-in-Britain outpost"—is affiliated with the William Allen White committee in the United States.

He declared the main object would be to counter "propaganda hostile to the true interests of the United States."

Bette Davis Is on Trail Of Third Academy 'Oscar'

'All This and Heaven Too' Is of That Caliber; Movietone News Shooting Technicolor Virginia; This, That and the Other About the Theater

THOSE WHO HAVE READ ominous things concerning the lachrymose quality of the Warner Brothers picturization of Rachel Field's novel of "All This and Heaven Too," may take immediate heart. The very first reel of the picture, to be accorded an invitational preview in the Departmental Auditorium on Thursday night and to open on the Earle screen Friday, betrays the "secret" of a comparatively happy ending. The story is told by the familiar "flashback" method and employs its denouement as a prologue—so to speak.

BELL

While there is no intention to review "All This and Heaven Too" a scant 15 minutes—as this is written—after yesterday's press preview, there can be no harm in disclosing at once that the Burbank studios poured their all into the making of this 2-hour-and-21-minute feature. It presents a completeness of detail, a substantial and impressive dignity, a punctiliousness of direction and a distinction of cast that would have met every "road show" requirement of the period antedating the gargantuan "Gone With the Wind." There is already talk of another Academy Award for Bette Davis on the basis of her performance in the costellar role opposite Charles Boyer. There should be the same sort of conversational bestowal of the popular accolade upon Mr. Boyer and Barbara O'Neil, the story's symbols of tragedy.

If a close parallel of the domestic problems upon which the story is based were needed, it might be found—in much more sketchy form—in James Hilton's "We Are Not Alone," in which Paul Muni and Jane Bryan were the protagonists, now succeeded by Mr. Boyer and Miss Davis.

The cast assembled for this majestic effort resembles a "Who's Who" of Hollywood's better actors. They are engaged, to be sure, in a somber project, but one that is not so grimly tragic as to tear the heart out, or drown the eyes. "All This and Heaven Too" deserves to be ranked among those precious few pictures that do justice to powerful and widely popular novels.

Eighteen members of the FBI Recreation Association Theater Group, under the direction of Paul A. Neuland, will present "Robin of Sherwood" as the third Summer Festival program at the Sylvan Theater tonight, at 8:15. The piece was written by Prof. J. R. Crawford, of Yale University, and adapted to the uses of the Sylvan Theater by Mr. Neuland. It will be preceded by a concert by the WPA Symphonic Orchestra.

If he turns out to be as clever as the card announcing his birth, he will easily outstrip his dad in "show business." I mean, the presumable likeness of a chubby young man drifts in from Detroit, bearing this legend: "LIFE begins at the Hurfords—Jackson Shields Hurford, jr., June 12, 1940." That would be the son of the Jack Hurford, who was assistant manager of the Fox Theater in this city—before its adoption by Loew's, Inc.—for a considerable stretch of years and now has been serving in a like capacity out Michigan way even longer than that. Congratulations is what I always say.

Our old friend Agnes Grant, one of the better cymbal-whangers, bobs up at Virginia Beach to say that Technicolor picture-making has invaded the State of Virginia for the first time, under the aegis of Fox Movietone News and the direction of Tony Muto, Washington manager of that sharp-shooting organization. The boys are making a travelogue depicting typical scenes and recreations in various parts of the State. It will be described by the invisible Lowell Thomas, from the sound track. One of the features will be beach, setting-up exercises by approximately 100 beautiful bathing girls—count 'em, 100. I can hardly wait!

The grapevine brings disturbing word that the plutocratic Mr. Edmund Plohn, manager of the National Theater, is millionairing it again with Leonard Bergman, executive administrator of the Erlanger estate, at Mr. Bergman's opulent fishing lodge in Maine. Mr. Plohn has always contended that this sort of thing is too rich for his blood—the dissembling so-and-so.

So-That's-the-Kind-of-a-Guy-You-Are Note

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, July 8 (INS).—The persistent gossip that Norma Shearer had backed George Raft in a company to produce his own pictures and release them through R.K.O. is apparently without any foundation. Saturday, when I was out on the Warner lot, they told me that George would start with Brynie Foy in three weeks on "South of Argentine"—a little tropical number by Barry Trevor.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Not only does that settle Mr. Raft's movie future—but it marks the return of Geraldine Fitzgerald, the little Irish girl, who took time out to have a baby. She plays the femme lead. Now that the little one is old enough to leave, Geraldine who had a most promising career, is taking up where she left off as a potential star.

Katie Hepburn started work on "Philadelphia Story" Friday and everyone was amazed at the way the lady has changed her tune. Not only was everything sweetness and light, with La Hepburn saying how happy she is to make another movie, but she said she never disliked Hollywood and couldn't understand what all the shooting was about. She told the startled M.-G.-M. press department that the only reason she hadn't met the press was that she was too busy making tests and that her sets wouldn't be closed to visiting scribes. Wonder how long all this will last—or am I too cynical? John Howard goes into the Hepburn movie and, mark my words, that will be the straw that breaks the camel's back as far as his Paramount contract is concerned. He has made twice as many pictures off the lot as on and consequently he is eager to free lance when his contract terminates in two months.

Snapshots of Hollywood at random: The Ian Hunters are adopting a little English refugee, a child who lost her parents in the war; Maureen O'Hara's heartbeat is Will Price, dialogue director on "Gone With The Wind;" M.-G.-M. insisted on Lana Turners taking a chaperone to Honolulu. Interesting that Richard Cantillion, her attorney, is Bentley Ryan's uncle. Ryan is Greg Bautzer's law partner; Allan Curtis and Ilona Massey will do an altar march as soon as his divorce from Priscilla Lawson is final; Peaches Browning, who became a headliner after she married "Daddy" Browning, at the La Conga with S. C. Brams, an interior decorator.

The West Coast convention of the scientific astrologers opens July 9. Bianca Holmes, wife of Stuart Holmes, veteran actor, is on the executive committee; Eddy Duchin, still limping, at the Pirates Den with Jane Pickens, who, gossips say, is his favorite gal friend; Franchot Tone and Gobina Wright, jr., making a round of the New York night spots according to Eastern gossip;

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

'Sweetbrier,' Nifty Entr'acte Roadside Tops

Villainy Battles Heroism and Song In Old Red Barn

By Richard L. Coe

"Don't Go in the Lions' Cage Tonight, Mother Darling, for the Lions Are Ferocious and They Bite!" is the Roadsiders' entr'acte for "Sweetbrier," a revival, with more villains of the blackest hearts, of the most stirring renunciation, of the most innocent people and a hero with the simplest mentality that even this untiring organization has ever given us.

"Sweetbrier," or "The Flower Girl of New York," began its fortnight out on the Rockville pike last night, and a pleasure it is, too. Unlike their last offering, when the play was not so amusing as the interpolated songs, this sturdy epic of Lizzie May Elwyn's is just about as funny as that sextet's anxiety about mother and the lions. Illustrated with the unabashed clarity of a candid camera and spiritually sung with a throbbing tenor by Larry Lawrence, those few minutes between acts two and three are worth a couple of visits.

Whatever "Sweetbrier" is all about we wouldn't know. Lizzie May Elwyn knew and she told it often in long, involved perorations by just about every character she could find, but wherever a character would leap into a carefully detailed explanation of just what was happening to whom, we were so caught either by the nobility of their expressions, the general meanness of their character, for their unerring ability to choose just the exact cliche, it was simply too much trouble to figure it all out. There is something about twin brothers, a wronged wife, a wronged daughter, some revealing papers, the most appallingly simple hero that ever stalked the stage and the pertest minx that ever went by the goofy name of Sweetbrier.

But in and out of all these declamations runs the best work some of Roadside's more familiar players have ever done. Norman Rose is so wreched, outspoken a villian that he is hissed from his first appearnace leering through a window about to steal these papers.

Miss Core a Sensation

Natalie Core is the slinky dame in the shimmering gown to the ultimate eyebrow. She has some whoppers to utter and, man, she utters 'em! Lord help us if many more women so scorned inhabit our planet. Miss Core, in other words, is a sensation . . . even as Mother before and after her expedition into the lions' cage.

Betty Brunstetter is the heroine who goes over the mill-race and manages to get back to the Bowery, a part deliciously suited to the appealing Betty. Kenneth Banghart's activities in the double role of twins are nothing short of immense, sinned against or sinning, it's an active fellow he turns out of one suit into another. Larry Lawrence's finger-pointing and slow-witted hero is a neat impression of what Lizzie May must have had in mind for her darlin' "Sweetbrier." And Anne Ives got a spontaneous hand for her gently humorous Ann Abigail Hunter.

So you see, there's plenty of the sure-fire stuff in "Sweetbrier."

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, July 8.

11 P. M.: "Adolf Berle was visited at the State Department by Glenn Allen, who once studied under Berle and who now is a judge's secretary," a Washington visitor reports at the Barberry Room. "Berle greeted him with a question: 'What's the capital of Brazil?' and then quizzed Allen for 15 minutes on South American geography, history and trade. 'I was trying to prove to myself,' Berle explained, 'just how little the American public knows about our most important neighbors'" . . . "Last week I saw Maurice Chevalier, who recently wanted $10,000 a week to come here," a newly arrived Clipper passenger states at the Cafe Pierre. "Chevalier is in Lisbon. He left everything he owned in Paris and is waiting his turn to come here" . . . "Jim Barton, who played Jeeter Lester in 'Tobacco Road' for two years, will perform at the Ivoryton summer theater," a producer informs at Sardi's. "Jim had his choice of plays. He decided on 'Tobacco Road'."

12 P. M.: "Here's what made me want to reduce," Alfred Hitchcock confesses at the Versailles. "The British Embassy arranged an audience for me at the Vatican. I had no dress suit, so in the morning I rushed to a place in Rome where dress suits can be rented. The owner had all the suits on one rack. He took one look at me and, without even measuring me or asking my size, he immediately walked to the suit at the very end of the rack" . . . "Yes, marriage has changed me," Harry Danning, the Giant catcher, confesses at Toots Shor's. "In the old days I used to carry a couple of hundred dollars when I went out to the ball park. Now, just 50 cents" . . . "My wife," Arturo Godoy announces at the Riviera, "will play Scarlett O'Hara in the Spanish version of 'Gone With the Wind.'"

1 A. M.: "Harriet Hoctor will feature a new ballet, called 'Harp With a Woman's Head,'" a dance director reports at Lum Fong's. "Judge Healy, the SEC commissioner, suggested the dance to her" . . . I sat with this girl, and then got a long distance phone call," Proprietor Monte Proser relates at the Beachcomber. "I asked a friend sitting nearby to come over and mind the girl for me. When I came back a half hour later I noticed a strained feeling between them, so I took him aside and asked what was the matter? 'You dope,' he screamed at me, 'don't you know that girl's my ex-wife? We were divorced last week.'" . . . "Dennis Agany and Emery Heim, who wrote the music for Hedy LaMarr'sfirst m ovie, 'Ecstasy,' are here now and have a new song, which they've dedicated to Hedy," a song writer states at the Chateau Moderne. "It's called 'Nobody Knows That I Love You.' The lyrics are by Lou Lawrence, a former WPA worker."

2 A. M.: "F. vanWyck Mason organized a movement to prevent children from having firecrackers, because they're so dangerous," a publisher informs at Leone's. "Mason never allowed his own children to have firecrackers on July 4. This year he promised them that if his new book, 'Stars on the Sea,' sold more than 50,000 copies he'd permit the kids to have firecrackers. So last Wednesday he bought them $100 worth" . . . "Gant Gaither, the 22-year-old producer at the Miami Beach Playhouse, has been reading 200 play scripts in New York," a producer reports at the Hurricane. "Gaither found three promising plays. He plans to give them trial productions in Miami next season and then, after a tour, bring them to Broadway."

3 A. M.: "Ben Hecht told some writers how hard he worked on the screen play of 'Gone With the Wind,'" a Hollywood arrival relates at the Swing Club. "When Ben was asked why he didn't demand collaborative credit he said, 'Because I want my name on the screen all by itself, or not at all.' So Everett Freeman asked him, 'Isn't a split credit on 'Gone with the Wind' better than a solo credit on your 'Let Freedom Ring?'" . . . "Remember that much-publicized lawsuit between John Barrymore and his former wife, Dolores Costello, regarding the support of their children?" a lawyer states at the Stork Club. "Well, it's being settled right now" . . . "The Abe Lyman-Ben Bernie feud is still on," a band leader declares at the Swing Club. "Abe withdrew his application from a golf club because he heard Ben would blackball him."

5 A. M.: Max Waxman, manager of Jack Dempsey, corners Harry Mendel, manager of Tony Galento, and suggests that a fight be promoted between both their charges . . . "Galento," Mendel states, "got $500 for refereeing a fight in Montreal. Yesterday we got an offer of $600 to go back and referee another fight there. I guess the cables to Montreal must've been cut—and they hadn't heard of the Baer fight" . . . "Senator Tobey raised such a rumpus about the census invasion of privacy regarding incomes that 250,000 private blanks were printed for persons who refused to answer directly to the census taker," a census official relates at Reuben's. "Well, only 30,000 of those blanks were used. New Dealers want to dump the rest into the Senator's office."

Deferred Visit

Because of her assignment in "The Philadelphia Story," Ruth Hussey must postpone her trip home. The actress had planned to spend two weeks with her family at their summer home in Connecticut.

In Hollywood

Hollywood, July 8.

Was surprised to see so many women turn out early in the morning in answer to Sam Goldwyn's roll call for the Red Cross. Sam's chairman of the Hollywood chapter. All prominent producers' and actors' wives were in attendance. Mrs. Mervyn LeRoy's speech will be remembered—she said. "Let us forget all this small-town chit-chat and bickering at our dinner table, as to who gets the greatest credit for the greatest parties. It's all for one and one for all, and for the Red Cross. Why, I've listened to things at private dinners that make me shudder."

HOPPER

Lucile Gleason, who's never stopped giving her time to the needy, said, "In our zeal to help stricken Europe, let's not forget our unfortunates at home who aren't well fed nor clothed, and are unable to work. Let's give a portion of what we make to the Motion Picture Relief Fund, Salvation Army, as well as to the Red Cross."

What they propose doing is to send the biggest stars in three different units on personal appearance tours throughout the country. That's all very well, but they're talking about variety shows. How many of our biggest names in pictures could get up and do a buck and wing?—put over a song, monologue, or what have you?

One reason they're top stars is that they've been put in carefully selected stories, have had the last word in photography, sound, mechanical perfection and perfect casts. Now, what are they going to do when they get out there alone? Even the great Valentino flopped when he wasn't in a picture.

If they'd do a play and let the stars who have had stage training act—that would be something. The stage stars did that during the last war, when we had Minnie Maddern Fiske, Laurette Taylor, and others of like caliber playing bits. Why, they took in as much as $100,000 a night, because the comedians preceded the play and auctioned off every seat in the house.

Strike Halts Work on New Bridge

Construction work on the Massachusetts Avenue Bridge and on other projects throughout Washington, which has been going at blitzkrieg pace, has been temporarily halted. A strike by 261 employes of the Smoot Sand and Gravel Corporation has cut off material for the building operations. Bridge abutments (A and B) are partly complete. From a dirt fill (C) made in 1893, 150 tons of earth must be removed to permit widening of Rock Creek and Potomac Parkway (1 and 2) which passes under Massachusetts avenue

Where the Townsfolk Meet

Widening of M street, the Southwest section's main drag, is another project which faces the possibility of being halted. From Delaware avenue (foreground) to Maine avenue (along the waterfront in the background) trees have already been removed

K STREET OVERPASS (broken line, left) close by the sand and gravel company, will also have to wait until the strike is settled. One section (right) has been completed

Mrs. Hull Makes Plans For Trip to Havana

Prepares to Accompany Secretary of State To Cuban Capital Next Week as Other Official Hostesses Go to Chicago Convention

By Hope Ridings Miller.

WHAT'S BEING WORN in Havana this season is a current concern of Mrs. Cordell Hull, who will accompany her husband to the Cuban capital next week. While dozens of topflight official hostesses are looking over their wardrobes with an eye to frocks suitable for a midsummer visit to Chicago, the wife of the Secretary of State is surveying hers from an entirely different point of view.

MRS. CORDELL HULL

Chances are, she's wondering whether she'll need a topcoat for that plane flight across from Miami, and whether early spring costumes very much in order in the coolest summer Washington has had in many years can be used at all down in Havana. Probably she will tuck in some all-white ensembles and a couple of wide-brimmed straw hats to protect her from a summer sun that beats down unmercifully in Cuba almost all year.

Senora de Fernandez, wife of the newly arrived Minister of Costa Rica, might have given Mrs. Hull some tropical wardrobe advice yesterday afternoon at the small and informal tea that the Lady of State had in her apartment.

In keeping with her custom of entertaining all new envoys and their wives shortly after they arrive in Washington, Mrs. Hull was hostess yesterday to the Minister of Thailand and Mme. Seni Pramoj and the Costa Rican Minister and his wife. The Hull "home" at the Carlton Hotel is as much a haven of rest as anything you will find around this town. Handsomely furnished and air-conditioned, it is one spot nobody ever wants to leave. Guests fortunate enough to attend an informal party there, such as the one yesterday, invariably come away in a warm glow of admiration for the hostess and her distinguished husband who, if he can get away from his duties at the Department of State, usually drops in for a cup of tea with the guests.

BUT BACK TO PLANS for the trip to Cuba. As soon as the news broke that the Secretary of State would attend the Pan-American conference in Cuba (the Consultative Meeting of Foreign Ministers of the American Republics, if you would have the exact title), Capitalites began to speculate as to whether Mrs. Hull would accompany him.

"But of course she will," was the opinion of some of her close friends. "She always goes with him." Beginning with the London Economic Conference in 1933, she has accompanied him to every international meeting he has attended on foreign soil. She has watched history in the making at the Seventh International Conference of American States in Montevideo in 1935; at the Inter-American Conference in Buenos Aires in 1936, and at the Eighth International Conference in Lima in 1938.

Revision of Taxes, Increase In Debt Limit Forecast

Defense Request To Necessitate Change, Officials Say

Sweeping revision of the Nation's tax system and a boost in the legal debt limit will be necessary after Congress approves the President's forthcoming request for nearly $5,000,000,000 for defense, Treasury circles admitted yesterday.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau told reporters that he does not plan to ask for upward revision of the $49,000,000,000 debt limit until next year "when we are spending the money." But he did not rule out the possibility of a debt-limit boost earlier and his statement was taken as an admission that a lift of the ceiling is inevitable.

Morgenthau also said Treasury experts are working on plans to revise the entire tax system and, it was believed, these plans are approaching a final stage for submission to Congress.

The initiative toward general tax revision will have to come from Capitol Hill, however, Morgenthau said. His attitude always has been that the Treasury is ready at any time to furnish tax plans when an invitation is received from Congress.

Present Taxes Believed Insufficient

Official feeling among Treasury advisers yesterday was that tax laws now in effect and the excess profits tax projected by the President would not be sufficient to cover Government expenditures—even to cover defense outlays—during the year to come.

Their thought was that, insofar as possible, emergency defense expenditures should be accompanied by tax measures broad enough to achieve a "pay as you go" balance between income and outgo for national protection.

To achieve such a balance, they admitted, will necessitate general revision of taxes.

This revision, it was officially predicted, probably would include even lower personal exemptions in the income tax law, a stiffer rate of surtaxes and perhaps even a raise in the basic 4 per cent levy on personal incomes.

While working on revision plans, Treasury officials yesterday also put the finishing touches on tax concessions to business firms engaged in national defense projects.

Concessions to Industry

After a White House conference between the President, Secretary Morgenthau nad Treasury tax experts, it was learned that provision for depreciation allowances on plants built to execute defense contracts will be coupled with the President's request for a tax on excess profits.

Secretary Morgenthau said he believed legislation would be necessary to effect a change in present depreciation allowance arrangements.

It was felt among Treasury officials that more liberal schedules of amortization for plant additions would be granted to industry.

Plans to lift the legal debt limit are occasioned by the fact that the total borrowing of the Treasury is now just shy of $43,000,000,000, while Army and Navy appropriations and contract authorizations just approved by Congress may well lift this borrowing total to well above $49,000,000,000 by June 30, 1941, end of this fiscal year.

Secretary Morgenthau announced that the Treasury shortly will seek $500,000,000 to $700,000,000 in new money by selling a bond issue, the first such quest for new money since December, 1939.

On December 8, 1939, the Treasury sold $571,000,000 in 2 per cent bonds, due in 1948-50, all new money.

Again, on December 22, in a refunding operation, the Treasury sold an issue of 2¼ per cent bonds of 1951-53.

Kunze said no one would dare be an officer of the bund if the bill were enacted

Sweden Seeks Trade Pacts In Reich Area

Normalized Scandinavia Object of Parleys; Is Cooperating With Nazis

By the Associated Press

Stockholm, July 8.—Aiming at a "normalized" Scandinavia, Sweden is openly pursuing a policy of close cooperation with Nazi Germany in order to save the trade which is Sweden's life blood.

Preservation of this trade and safeguarding of her old "living space" are the compelling reasons which have caused Sweden to recognize German expansion in Europe and to seek multilateral trade agreements with Germany and German-controlled Denmark and Norway.

These agreements are expected to be completed this week, and Premier Per Albin Hansson said Sweden's position was "now quite different."

This Swedish policy is based necessarily on the fact that Germany's control of the northern "back door" has closed the British market to Swedes, and Germany becomes the nation's only big customer.

Dickering With Soviet

Aware also of Russian interests in the Baltic, Sweden is seeking to negotiate trade outlets with the Soviet Union, but this project is incomplete.

The new multilateral agreements are designed to promote interchange of goods between the countries concerned. Negotiations with Norway so far have concerned only Sweden's trade with that country; in other words, there is no hope, as yet, of using Norwegian or western Swedish seaports for trade with the Americas.

An interesting feature of the Norwegian negotiations is that they have been conducted with representatives of the existing regime. The position of the Norwegian Legation here, linked with King Haakon's refugee government in England, is not yet clarified.

Haakon Tells Why He Keeps Crown

London, July 8 (AP)—(Via radio).—Haakon, exiled King of Norway, asserted in a broadcast from Buckingham Palace today that in refusing to abdicate he felt sure he was acting "in conformity with the wishes of the Norwegian people."

"My motto has always been and forever will be everything for Norway.

"It would grieve me deeply if I were to separate from Norway," he added, but said he would take such a step if he believed that was the wish of the Norwegian people and the Norwegian government.

Haakon declared the Norwegian constitution provided that the King "may stay up to six months outside the kingdom without the consent of the Storting" (the Norwegian Parliament) and added that the Storting had given permission for the King to leave the country, if necessary, without setting a time limit.

The present Norwegian administration in Oslo which demanded his resignation was German-dominated, he said, and did not represent the will of the people.

Senate Urged to Provide For 35 Dreadnaughts

"must be ready and be stronger than potential aggressors.

"To be second best is not only an invitation to war, but to utter disaster. All history proves this contention and the defeat of the French offers a classic example."

Other defense developments yesterday included:

The War Department ordered 1,100 additional troops to Alaska, to defend the new air base at Anchorage. They will include recruits and the remainder of the Fourth Infantry at Fort George Wright, Wash., part of which is already at Anchorage.

Plan Gas Storage

Dr. Robert E. Wilson, chief oil adviser to the defense commission, proposed construction of underground storage facilities for high-powered aviation gasoline.

Representatives of the War and Navy departments prepared to testify today before the Senate Military Affairs Committee in favor of compulsory military training and to present an Administration plan in lieu of the pending Burke-Wadsworth measure.

Committee Chairman Sheppard predicted passage of some form of compulsory military training bill, declaring "everyone seems to be in favor of it in principle."

Marine Corps officials revealed that Maj. Al Williams, formerly Navy speed flier and now a newspaper columnist, had resigned his commission in the Marine Reserves, because he "felt he could be of more service to his country at present without military affiliations." Williams, who resigned from the Navy some years ago because the high command would not continue his speed plane experiments, has been sharply critical of Administration aviation policies. The Marine Corps said his action was "entirely voluntary."

Capper Offers Bill To Settle Claim In D.C. Boy's Death

Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, yesterday introduced a bill to authorize the payment of a $3,500 claim to Anthony Borsellino, barber, of 1214 Good Hope road southeast, whose son, Joseph, was killed by a District National Guard truck seven years ago.

Capper's bill follows the vetoing last Wednesday of a bill to pay the claim out of the United States Treasury. President Roosevelt, in his veto message, said he would have no objection to legislation that would provide for payment from District funds.

Joseph Borsellino, 10, was killed June 23, 1933, as he stood behind a truck at Third street and Maine avenue southwest.

Waitress Sues To Rid Herself Of Two Husbands

Mrs. Gertrude Finnacom, hotel waitress, sought freedom from two husbands at once in the District Court yesterday.

Mrs. Finnacom asked a divorce from Franc C. Adams, who, she said, married her in Lee County, Ala., June 16, 1927, and deserted her December 1, 1928.

After Adams told her he had got a divorce, she said, she was married to Joseph E. Finnacom, 34 Bates street northwest, in Baltimore, August 20, 1932. Since they learned that Adams did not get a divorce and that their marriage was not valid, Mrs. Finnacom said, her second husband has been cruel to her.

She asked that her marriage to Finnacom be annulled, for custody of their child Yvonne, 6, for alimony and for an order forbidding Finnacom to molest her.

50 'Safety Town' Children Take Traffic Course

The first of the "Safety Town" demonstrations, a short traffic instruction course for children, was given yesterday at the Logan Playground, Third and G streets northeast.

Nearly 50 colored children took part in the demonstration, which is being sponsored by the American Automobile Association.

The demonstrations will be given at District playgrounds throughout the city during the summer. Following the Logan Playground demonstration, which ends Wednesday, the miniature city will be moved Thursday to the New York Avenue Playground, First and New York avenue northwest. All demonstrations take place from 11 a. m. to 12:30 p. m.

Nazis See Plot Upon Martinique

Secretary of State Hull said at his press conference yesterday that reports from the neutrality patrol have not clarified the situation at Martinique.

Officials here believe that, if the cruisers and aircraft carrier should dash for American ports, they would not be interfered with; and that, if they headed for Europe they might be followed by the British but would not be stopped within the 300-mile safety zone drawn around the American Hemisphere.

Should these hopes not be met and fighting develop within those waters, officials are not prepared to say what attitude would be adopted. However, it appeared that the United States was not disposed to acquiesce in a European blockade of a Western Hemisphere country or possession.

"Trusteeship" Urged

New York, July 8 (AP).—An American "trusteeship" over French and Dutch possessions in the Western Hemisphere "until full independence is restored to those countries," as advocated today by the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies.

The committee, in three new basic objectives adopted in a move to make itself a permanent organization headed by William Allen White, Emporia, Kans., editor, also advocated:

1. Unrestricted sale to Great Britain of surplus food supplies, planes, guns, ships and ammunition "not necessary to our national defense."

2. Evacuation, "when necessary," of mothers, children and old people from the British Isles to the Western Hemisphere.

3. Removal of restrictions banning United States citizens from joining Allied forces.

Annam Emperor Reported Slain

London, July 8 (AP).—A Reuters (British news agency) dispatch from Bangkok, Thailand, said today the local press reported that Emperor Bao Dai of Annam had been assassinated at Hue, an east coast town of Annam. No confirmation was available at Bangkok, Reuters said.

The emperor, 27, succeeded his father on the throne of Annam, one of four protectorates of French Indo-China, in 1925.

Nazi Troops in Spain, Heralding Franco Entry In War and Attack on Gibraltar, U. S. Hears

Possible entry of Spain into the European war on the side of the Axis powers in the near future caused increasing concern in official circles in Washington last night, as dispatches from European capitals told of persistent reports that German troops had crossed the Spanish frontier.

From Madrid the reports of concentrations of Spanish troops for special maneuvers were taken to be a prelude to possible action not only against the British fortress of Gibraltar, but also against Portugal, Great Britain's oldest ally. The German troops were said to have been sent to back up these forthcoming attacks.

The reports of German troops came as officials received word that numbers of German "tourists" were already in Spain, and unconfirmed reports that German troops were already stationed at Bilbao and Salamanaca.

Spain Becomes Alarmed

Despite its moves to enter the war, the Spanish government is evidently very nervous over the approach of the German troops to its frontier. From the beginning of the European war, Spain has been strongly in favor of a victory by the Axis powers. When Italy entered the war, Spain very ostentatiously announced that it had changed its position from that of neutrality to "nonbelligerency," the same position as Italy had taken up until its entry into the war.

When German troops cracked the French lines completely, however, and reached the Pyrenees, the Madrid press, which up to that time had been very enthusiastic, became somewhat more reserved.

Gen. Francisco Franco also took steps to strengthen his hand by removing Gen. Juan Yaguey, air minister and commander of the Morrocan troops during the civil war, and replacing him with Gen. Vidon, reported to be closer to Franco.

Just Hint From Germany

However, such moves do not mean that there has been any change in the position of Spain toward the Axis powers, but rather a realization that from now on Germany, with its mechanized units within easy striking distance over the border, must be the most important factor in Spanish policy.

Though the Portuguese government has given no open sign that it is nervous at the new trend in Spain, and at the German victory in France, it is reported that there is an increasing fear that Portugal may become involved through its British alliance.

The Portuguese government has never made any real military establishment because Portugal was too small to support a well-equipped army. The government has devoted all its funds to giving the Portuguese population as good a living as was possible in an extremely poor land.

Portugal has always looked to the British fleet to defend its farflung possessions, and even now it can still rely on such support. The Azores, Madeira and Cape Verdi Islands might prove of extreme strategical importance to the enemies of Great Britain, while the conquest of Portugal itself would put Germany and its friends in control of the whole western European coast from Norway to the Mediterranean.

Educators Back U. S. Training Bill

New York, July 8 (AP).—Presidents and representatives of 22 men's colleges and universities voted unanimously today to support the Burke-Wadsworth selective training and service bill now before Congress.

The educators voted at a conference to petition the War and Navy departments to extend R. O. T. C. and Naval Reserve training units to those colleges which do not now have them.

SUMMER life at Virginia Hot Springs follows pretty much the pattern designed for it by a host of famous Virginians during its first hundred years, before the virtues of its cure and the graciousness of its hospitality had penetrated to distant parts. Although we've added the most luxurious of modern comforts and conveniences, we have preserved and cherished the spirit of the Old Dominion which prevailed in days long past.

Join us this summer in some of these friendly and informal sports events! Clark Skeet Shoot, July 26; Horse Show, August 8; Fairacre Golf on Labor Day. Newspaper Women Told Of Treachery in Norway

Comdr. Riiser-Larsen, Naval Air Service Chief of Staff at Time of Invasion, Addresses Club at Tea in Raleigh

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post's Club Editor.

Confirmation of all the accounts of German treachery in Norway from the betrayal of the Norwegians by the German and Austrian boys whom they had befriended in childhood, to the masquerading of German troop ships under flags of other nations, including our own, was contained in a talk yesterday afternoon by Commander Riiser-Larsen, Naval Attache of the Norwegian Legation, before members of the Newspaper Women's Club.

Commander Riiser-Larsen, who was chief of staff of the naval air service when the invasion took place, declared his conviction that the Norwegians had been forced to send the request for the resignation "our our beloved King," to which the monarch replied from London yesterday. Parliament, in a special session after the king's hazardous flight to England, granted him permission to remain out of the country for the period of its occupation.

Commander Riiser-Larson and his wife, who escaped from Norway after he had been ordered by his government to get to London if possible, were guests of honor at a tea given by the club at the Raleigh Hotel. They arrived in Washington only a short time ago.

The smile of warm friendliness with which they greeted guests as they stood in the receiving line with the club president, Miss Katharine Brooks, changed to an expression of grim seriousness as he described the invasion.

"No means were too low for the Germans to use. I am not criticizing. I am just stating facts," he said, and then he let the facts speak for themselves.

Germans Made Errors in Plans

He told how the Norwegians had taken little German and Austrian boys into their homes after the first World War, fed them, cared for them and brought them back to health, teaching them the Norwegian language and giving them the freedom of their homes and the countryside. These boys, grown to Nazihood, returned, wearing Norwegian uniforms, burned the farmhouses where they had been sheltered, dropped bombs on little children seeking safety from the flames and caused the real Norwegians to be mistaken for the invaders and shot, in many instances because the confused farmers had no way to distinguish between them, he said.

There was comparatively little treason among the Norwegians themselves, he said, except for a few who sought political advantage through it.

The German plans were to take the country before it could resist, but the plans were not perfect. Cable messages were sent to the Norwegian army ordering it not to resist and similar ones to the navy, but the Germans did not know the navy received all its official orders by radio, so it recognized the falsity of the cabled messages and continued to fight. One German boat, carrying 1,400 men, among them the admiral who was to have taken charge in Oslo, and 300 members of the Gestapo, was sunk, he said. But the peace-loving country, whose money had gone into social reforms rather than armaments, was practically helpless.

Commander Riiser-Larsen said Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, United States Minister to Norway, had an affidavit to the fact that a whaling boat came into the harbor of Oslo flying the American flag and later disgorged hundreds of German soldiers.

Describes Bombing Of King's Refuge

He described the two-and-a-half hour bombing of the woodland refuge of the King, followed by a machine gun barrage, and how a band of farmers had foiled an attempt to capture the monarch.

"I beg of you, as Democrats and as friends of liberty, to give our dear King's speech heed," he said. Closing with a reference to the dismay and suffering of his country, he expressed hope in "the prayers of the thousands of Norwegians and all liberty-loving" people" and declared "we will never lose our faith in righteousness."

Those who alternated at the tea table were Mrs. William N. Doak, Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie, Mrs. Emil Hurja and Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin.

Among the guests were Mrs. Lewis B. Schwellenbach, wife of Senator Schwellenbach, of Washton; Mrs. Sol Bloom, wife of Representative Bloom, of New York, and Miss Vera Bloom; Mrs. J. J. Mack, Mrs. Jack Mackenzie, of Honolulu, whose husband is in the territorial government; Miss Florence Maud Cresswell, of Vancouver, British Columbia, a cousin of Mrs. Hurja, whom she is visiting; Mrs. C. S. McDowell, Mrs. Robert Strauss, who is here for a short visit; Mrs. Barge Hartz, Mrs. W. E. P. French, Mrs. John Bailey, of Canton, N. C.; Mrs. James Sheen, of Larchmont, N. Y., daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas G. Alvord, of Washington; Mrs. Rupert Slaughter, Mrs. S. R. White, Miss Virginia Schaffer, Mrs. Dicie Emison, who is here from Texas.

ZONTA NEWS — The Zontagram, which can always be counted on for interesting notes about members of the Zonta Club, announces in its July issue that Anna Muddiman has just been reelected for the tenth year as assistant treasurer of Calvary Baptist Sunday School. This requires her to keep a detailed record of all receipts and disbursements from a membership of more than 3,000.

"Muddy," as she is known to the Zontians, is carrying on the work which her father started in 1882, says the Zontagram.

Defense Cooperation Pledged By National Women's Clubs

The board of directors of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs in session at Asheville, N. C., yesterday passed resolutions pledging cooperation in plans for national defense, giving emergency powers to its executive committee and urging a nationally coordinated plan both for the defense program and for war relief.

The resolutions, recommended by the national president, Dr. Minnie L. Maffett, of Dallas, Tex., provided that "as members of the federation and as citizens of a democracy, we appraise with calmness the problems of our times and pledge ourselves to aid in their intelligent and far-reaching solution by working constructively and wholeheartedly on the tasks assigned us.

"That in view of present world conditions for the ensuing fiscal year only the executive committee be given emergency powers to make such decisions as may require immediate attention.

"That we favor whatever effort is necessary to effect a nationally coordinated plan for national defense and also for emergency war relief, rather than the multitudinous and sporadic efforts made at present by various groups and organizations."

From Judge Lucy Somerville Howorth, of Washington, chairman of the federation's public affairs committee, came a report on the public affairs work of the 1,600 clubs and 73,000 members throughout the country.

In the report of the international relations chairman, Mrs. David Simms, of Hastings, Nebr., it was recommended that the club international relations committees intensify their work and begin monthly or fortnightly meetings to consider various problems in world affairs. She also advocated that the international relations committees throughout the country launch or cooperate in community forums or discussion groups on international affairs.

Another resolution pledging the federation to give generous consideration to the assistance of refugees in our country was adopted. Mrs. Simms said she thought this resolution was broad enough to enable the group to take action in regard to refugee children once the needs of these children are definitely placed before the American public.

On the international relations study program from July, 1940, to July 1941, will be the following items:

What foreign policy shall the United States adopt? How shall America contribute to a lasting peace? What kind of trade policy should we maintain to help reduce world expansion? What should be the defense policy of the United States? How can the United States work to maintain a policy of cooperation with the nations of Latin America for defense of the Western Hemisphere? What shall the policy of the United States be on refugees?

Mrs. Simms reported this item must be carefully studied in view of fifth column experiences in Holland and Belgium.

Dr. Maffett, in her opening address outlined the way in which American women can help to restore law and order to the world, presenting a six-point program, part of which follows:

"First—We can help set our national house in order. We can insist on a nonpartisan defense program to protect ourselves from foes without.

"Second—We can help to make democracy work better at home. We can see that children are better cared for in the nursery and the classroom. We can see that the people from other lands who seek harborage here are helped and really assimilated into American life. We can insist that all anti-American organizations be disbanded. I hope that we shall practice tolerance and kindness and not be torn apart by a monster witch-hunt; but I hope that we will keep track of the aliens here and not leave them free to attempt to infilter fascism, nazism or communism into democracy.

"Third—We can see that the fifth column has no place on our highways or byways while we avoid unfair criticism.

"Fourth—As women we can begin now, tonight, to bring about a revival of spiritual life in America. A religious nation is not likely to be an aggressor nation. The failure of spiritual forces throughout the world is a major cause of the world debacle.

"Fifth—We can show the suffering nations of the world that the enduring things of life—liberty, religious freedom, economic security, opportunity and personal happiness—flourish best in a democracy.

"Sixth—We can set about now getting ready for the peace, peace which will not be merely an armistice, an interlude while an exhausted world licks its wounds and prepares for the next war, but peace which will endure and rebuild a secure world.

Clubwomen Urged to Study Resolutions

Mrs. Edward R. Seal Interviewed Over Air By Mrs. E. B. Meritt

The responsibility of clubwomen to study resolutions before adopting them was discussed in a radio interview on the time allotted the District Federation of Women's Clubs over Station WOL yesterday morning. Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt, past president of the local federation and its radio chairman, interviewed Mrs. Edward R. Seal, who, for the last three years, has been director of publicity and a member of the board of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers.

Mrs. Meritt, pointing out the responsibility women should feel when they affiliate with any one of the large clubs, brought up the subject of resolutions. Mrs. Seal declared clubwomen were too willing to accept the advice of a committee chairman or some other interested member and to add their affirmative votes to a motion.

"Regardless of what effect this procedure may have on an organization—or its standing in its community—I believe it is a reflection on individual members if they vote affirmatively on a motion to pass a resolution and have made no effort to inform themselves as to the merits of it," she asserted.

Potential Power Lies in Their Scope

"If individual members could be made to realize what potential power lies within the scope of these national organizations—with a membership in the millions—they would also realize their own responsibility and would make a much more conscientious effort to be intelligently informed.

"Unless an organization is a definitely partisan association, it should keep clear of anything that savors of politics. It should—in my opinion—offer constructive criticism, if there is opportunity, but unless it can propose a constructive alternative, it should refrain from destructive criticism."

Mrs. Seal advocated as the first duty of American women today "to see that our own homes are completely and without any shadow of doubt, 100 per cent American. To show by precept and example that we are determined to maintain a democratic way of living, and, in that determination, to remember that one of the greatest of American heroes gravely pointed out: "United we stand—divided we fall."

Normal Standard Of Living Urged

Mrs. Seal decried reference to this period as a "great national emergency."

"While I believe that we should make every effort to prepare this Nation successfully to resist any kind of attack made upon it, I do not consider this a national emergency," she said. "Complete prepartion to defend our independence should be considered one of the orderly and necessary processes of an intelligent government—As individual members of nationally organized groups, one of the greatest services we can render our country is to maintain as nearly normal standards of living as possible."

In addition she asserted it was "a moral obligation" for all club women "to be intelligently informed on matters of public policy."

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

To a Bride

I

I give you not a tea-wagon or a set of berry spoons,
Nor any vague conventional wish for happiness,
Rather I say a prayer for you—that in the days to come,
You will keep always in your countenance,
That fresh expectancy, that open invitation
To experience, to knowledge, to all of life's adventure

II

That you may never let the little things creep in upon you,
And make you prisoner so that you may never lift your eyes,
To far horizons; and that you may never be so snug and happy,
Within your little nest as to grow heedless, calloused,
To the sufferings of those whose lives are not so neatly ordered,
And that no world of "me and mine" will ever close deceiving bars about you.

III

That love of "things" may not corrode your mind or spirit,
Nor make you mistress of a doll's house—worse still, a musem,
But that you may build a sanctuary in which all who enter,
May feel its peace, serenity, and sense in its vibrations
That love and safety there abide, yet also high adventure
Into those unseen realms of mind that stretch to cosmic spaces.

IV

That you may never let life set you in a mold that instantly proclaims you
A member of "Wives, Ltd.," with eyes narrowed in suspicion
Of all who do not follow step by step the pattern of your living,
Nor yet a jellied matron who with smirking self-complacence
Boasts of her secure lot and looks with pitying condescension
On those whose shoes but by the grace of accident she might be occupying.

V

That you may hoard at least a spark of the radiance love has brought you,
Retain an ember of that glow toward all other human creatures,
You now diffuse so easily from a heart overwarm with happiness,
And that the dull routine of sober days before you,
May never make you solid, apathetic, worse still bitter, disappointed,
Or tired in spirit of the world you now find so beatic.

Two Fur Coats For Each Woman Furriers' Goal

By the Associated Press

The slogan for prosperity used to be "A chicken in every pot," but now its "A fur coat on every back"—every feminine back, that is.

Some furriers double their aspirations, making it "Two fur coats for every woman; one for sports, one for dress."

In a gloomy world, the hopeful furriers are little rays of sunshine. Visit the August fur sales and you will understand why. Furs are cheaper, more plentiful and more attractive than ever before.

Federal Reserve figures for the six months beginning last August show that fur sales in many stores increased from 40 to 60 per cent. The national increase for the entire year was 28 per cent. This spring, fur sales held their gain with a 40 per cent increase over last year, and forecasters say furs will do even better this fall.

The rising tide of sales has wiped out price barriers. Very cheap furs are selling in unprecedented quantity. And so are very expensive ones. The girl with her first job feels abused if she, too, can't have a fur coat. She can have, at from $50 to $100, a choice of coney, muskrat, kid, caracul paw, mouton and many others. The mink-and-sable ladies want an extra fur coat for sports wear.

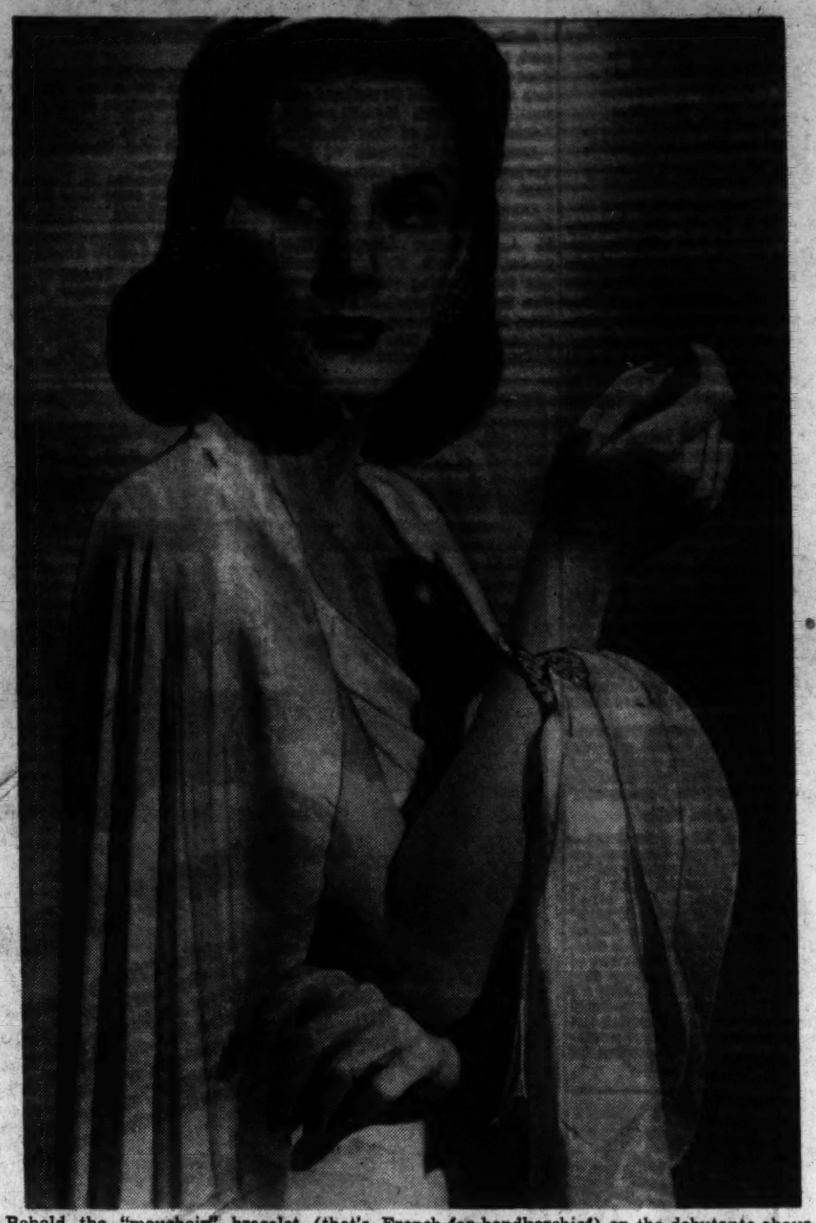
The 'Mouchoir' Bracelet for Debs



Behold the "mouchoir" bracelet (that's French for handkerchief) on the debutante above. The name tells the story. There's a slit slashing the diamonds of this bracelet big enough to hold a flowing chiffon handkerchief or even a thin shawl while you dine and dance at the current summer parties. Although this bracelet and the accompanying earrings are diamonds and platinum, the same idea might be interpreted from one of grandmother's attic heirlooms. Either way, it's a pleasant gift idea for debutantes or young ladies

Beauty Secrets

By CAROLYN ABBOTT

Foot Rejuvenation

AFTER A day of shopping or sightseeing, take a little time out of your regular beauty regime for your feet. Feet respond to pampering as much as your face. A little attention devoted to your feet will give them wings to lift your drooping spirits and you'll be able to dance longer with a happier smile on your face.

Here's a cocktail to rejuvenate hot, swollen, aching feet:

Take a good stiff brush, plenty of soap and hot water and work up a good lather. Scrub vigorously for several minutes. This rough treatment stimulates circulation of blood and removes any dead tissues from the skin surface.

Now turn the water on full force, as hot as you can bear it, and let it beat down on your feet for two minutes. Then switch quickly to cold water. Alternate this treatment several times. Spread the toes and pull them up as far as possible, then curl them under and hold. Continue this exercise with first one foot and then the other for at least two minutes under cold water.

Dry the feet with a strong upward motion. Rub hard. Dry carefully between the toes, spreading them wide (this is an exercise in itself). If you have time, practice lifting the towel from the floor by picking it up with the toes.

Use a cream or oil, preferably one with camphor, menthol or some other ingredient that will have a stimulating effect. With the fingertips of both hands use a firm stroking motion as if you were pulling on gloves. Start at the toes and continue along the sole of the foot up to the calf of the leg. Then take hold of each end of the toe and shake it.

Finish off with a dash of eau de cologne for a brisk rub. Dust your feet, especially between the toes, with a fragrant bath powder. If your feet perspire too freely use an antiseptic powder which has deodorizing properties.

Following are some general summertime tips:

Change your stockings twice a day if possible. Don't wear the same shoes two days in succession. Wear a larger size shoe. Walk barefoot when on the beach—it is one of the best beauty treatments.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

Mrs. Willkie Isn't Shy—She's Just Tactful and Careful of Utterances, Columnist Finds

New York, July 8.

ALL THE newspaper pieces out of Philadelphia called Mrs. Wendell Willkie "shy," so I burgled my way into the Republican candidate's apartment at 1010 Fifth Avenue yesterday to see if she is. I found out all right. She isn't. Tactful is the word for Edith. You can say smartly discreet, too. But not shy. No ma'm.

Mrs. Willkie's placid home life is now up the spout. Four volunteer secretaries cope with the mountains of messages and gifts that clutter up the seven-room flat furnished in pleasantly worn style. One of the ladies is Mrs. James Blaine Walker, jr., daughter of the late President Benjamin Harrison. She received me in a living room lined from floor to ceiling with Wendell's books, the most amazing mass of Americana I ever saw. History and biography mostly.

"I think reporters got the 'shy' idea in Philadelphia," she says, "because I said I wouldn't make speeches and that my husband does the talking for me." Her personal slogan is, "If you can't be big, you have to be mighty," and so the little Hoosier lady is mighty sure of herself, mighty choosy and picky with her words and all-fired mighty careful of the big boy's interests. She will never let him down or get him into jams with unguarded speech. Already she is smart at ducking questions or parrying them with equivocal answers.

Edith Willkie is a size 12, and jiggles the beam at 110. Her blonde hair is going grey, she minds telling her age, she wears almost no makeup and her attitude at this exciting time is defensively friendly. In every public word, papa comes first. She's a fast thinker, and a deliberately charming woman. If she should get into the White House, the "blue" tradition would go on. Her favorite dress hue is a grey-blue, called in the trade "Grey Dawn." It would follow Mrs. F. D. R.'s "Eleanor Blue" and Alice Roosevelt's "Alice Blue." Time will tell.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The most beautiful sight of the week-end at the sumptuous Westchester Bath Club, where cafe society does its eating, drinking and sunning in the summer, was Prince Serge Obolensky, the glamour man of the St. Regis Hotel, attired in brightly flowered Tahitian shorts and lolling by the swim pool. Strong women gasped with admiration at the spectacle.

High-low sign of the times. Those gorgeous fruit-and candy-filled baskets that used to be called bon voyage gifts when there was still overseas ship travel are now merely tagged "entraining baskets." The choo-choo's still run, thank heaven.

The best and loveliest of our famed fashion models are still working the fashion to pick up ice cream and mint julep money in the hot months. At one I saw gorgeous Babs Beckwith, who is also Mrs. Winnie Gardiner, and Dana Jenney, who also writes fashions for a local paper, and a new and somewhat smaller belle who is the absolute spitinimage of Vivien Leigh. Cries of "'Hi, Scarlett!" rose from the ringside as the pretty baby strutted by in a new hat.

Creamy Scrambled Eggs for After-Theater Parties

EVERYTHING at the Sunset Symphony Sunday evening blended to make an inspiring picture. With Old Glory swaying in the breeze, the Red Cross flag flying, and a new moon shining, the lovely music of the National Symphony Orchestra delighted many music-lovers.

The weather was not only perfect for this opening concert at the Water Gate, but it was just the kind of a night to put a keen edge on the appetite. I was in a party that included a newly married couple. The young husband of this couple suggested that we go to their apartment and he would show us how he could cook. And without any help the host served us scrambled eggs that were as smooth as silk. In fact, they were so delicious that he whipped up the second serving. There are many ways of making scrambled eggs, but the way these were cooked deserve special mention. Here is the way they were made.

Scrambled Eggs

Beat the whites and yolks of 8 eggs separately. Put into a double boiler top 4 tablespoons butter, 4 tablespoons cream, ½ teaspoon salt and pepper as desired. Fold the beaten whites into the beaten yolks, and add to mixture in boiler. Cook over very low heat, stirring constantly until the mass is creamy. Add 1 teaspoon chopped parsley to eggs just before talking from the double boiler. Serve on a warm platter, but not a hot one as heat toughens eggs. Too long cooking makes eggs tough, and they are then both unappetizing and indigestible.

Rye and white toast, plenty of hot coffee and maple nut cake were the other items that were served along with the eggs. The coffee maker and toastmaster, which were wedding gifts were put to use in making this night-time snack.

If You'd Tan Beautifully, Tan Slowly

Caution in Exposing Skin to Sun Is Wise And Less Painful

By Ida Jean Kain

Two weeks' vacation with pay and play begins for the working gal! Almost the first thing you notice—after a hasty glance around to see if there are a few nice men—is the golden tan of the feminine competition. Compared to them, you're so white you feel anemic!

Naturally, you are determined to acquire that sun-kissed look as soon as possible—but don't try to do it any sooner. If this is your first genuine exposure to sun, take it easy. Allow a full week in which to tan beautifully and painlessly.

The Danger Hours

The dangerous hours are between 11 o'clock in the morning and 3 in the afternoon. During those hours, your stay in the direct rays should be strictly limited to 15 minutes. You should be safe, however, for a whole hour in the early morning sun, and perhaps for another hour in the late afternoon. By the third day, you may be able to extend your early morning sunbathing to 1½ hours, with more in the late afternoon.

Whether you can take that amount of sun depends on how much of a tenderskin you are. The minute your skin feels hot to the touch or shows a tinge of red, scamper for the shade—regardless of whether your scheduled time is up. Another quarter of an hour's exposure might make your vacation just a painful memory.

The worst thing about a good burn is that you don't realize you are getting it until you've got it. You don't feel the burn for the breeze—at the time. This is especially true of those hazy days when the infra-red rays, the ones which burn without burning, come right through the vapor. Until you have acquired the protective coating which makes you immune to burn, you will be wise to spend the greater part of your day in the shade of a beach umbrella.

Caution Is Wise

With a little caution and the aid of some of those delightful suntan oils or creams, there is no excuse for burning yourself to a crisp, or drying out your skin. There's no percentage in either—one is painful, the other ageing.

These dire warnings are not intended to stop you from getting as much sun as you can take. Lying in the sun is wonderfully relaxing and just what the doctor orders for taut city nerves. In fact, it is so good for you that you shouldn't wait for your vacation to snatch a few minutes daily for suntanning. One of the busiest women we know goes up on the roof of her apartment every day the sun shines for just 30 minutes. She claims it is the finest beauty tonic ever invented.

But even though you must be wary of scorching yourself you should spend as many hours of your vacation out of doors as you can. Fresh air is a beauty tonic, too. It tones the superficial muscles, helps you to relax and to sleep more soundly.

Test Bedding Before Buying It

In buying new bedding remember that usually a light person rests more comfortably on a soft mattress that gives easily under pressure. Conversely, a heavyweight generally is more comfortable on a firm mattress.

Some mattresses are more flexible than others and some are constructed with the idea of giving extra support. To make the correct choice you should know which of these two is the more important to the person who will use the mattress.

The best test of satisfaction is to have him give the mattress you favor a lie-down test in the store. This will prove conclusively if your choice is the right one.

A Border Flower

The gentle lobella, its bright blithe blue so welcome as an annual border, was named for a celebrated physician and botanist, Mathias de Lobel, originally of Antwerp and Delft, later botanist to James I of England.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Having Lent All but $55 of Her Limited Capital To Son and His Wife, Who Call It Gift and Balk At Repayment, 84-Year-Old Widow Asks What to Do

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I would be glad if you can help me solve my problem. I am a widow, 84, with a son and daughter, and I took care of myself for the past 19 years—until the death of three sisters of mine, a few years ago. Then, my one surviving sister and I came to live with my married daughter and her family, as my son (also married, with no children) said he was not in a position to take us. He was not working at the time and he and his wife decided to break up housekeeping, and so they gave up their apartment. They have not lived together for three years.

When we came here to live, my sister, who is 81, deeded her part of the estate to my daughter, with the understanding that she was to be taken care of until her death. We have a good home here, but my son and his wife are angry with my daughter and her husband and quarrel with them over the telephone, although they don't come here.

The trouble is about money. I have $55 left out of $1,100. I have been very kind to my son and daughter. I lent my son $100 last Christmas and let his wife have $300 last summer. I have also bought her a lot of new clothes and given her many other things. She works as a Government stenographer and claims she has to pay for my son's room and board, although he drives a fine car and drinks a good deal. (He is a college man.) When he drinks, he fusses at me over the telephone, which upsets me terribly, as I have sciatica rheumatism. He is 53 and she is 50.

They used to take me for rides in their car sometimes, but she turned the car over to him after I had loaned them a good deal of money. He used to tell me she was so wonderful, and that she would pay back anything I I lent her. I haven't seen or heard anything of her for a long time, but my son called me a few minutes ago and told me they didn't owe me anything. He said they thought the money was a gift. Now, I don't know what to do to get the money back. I have letters from his wife, in which she thanks me for my help, but not a word about paying me back. She would pay interest, but that is all I would get. Now, please help me get it back.

My son and his wife are jealous of my daughter because she has her home. But they haven't any home because they spent all their money on good times. The only time my son calls me is when he is drinking. I had always thought his wife was a very nice woman, as I never had a cross word with her. I want my money back because I don't want to live off my son-in-law. I have never lived off anybody. C. G. W.

Problem for Attorney; Warning to Oldsters

DEAR C. G. W.: It seems to me that you would long since have discussed this problem with your daughter and her husband and that they would have insisted upon your taking legal action to compel repayment of the loans. In view of your son's and his wife's irresponsible (if not actually larcenous) attitude, I believe such a step will be necessary.

My advice to you is take your problem to the Legal Aid Bureau, located at 1409 L street northwest, telephone NAtional 8674. This bureau gives legal advice and representation, free of charge, to persons unable to pay for such service. I am told by an attorney that if it can be established to the satisfaction of court or jury that the transfer of money was understood (by both parties to the transaction) to be a loan, and not a gift—then you can get a judgment.

I should think that your own testimony, corroborated by that of your daughter and her husband, would be evidence enough—regardless of what your son and his wife may submit to the contrary. It stands to reason that a woman of 84, with the limited capital of $1,100, isn't going to give her money away, hand over fist, until finally she is stripped down to a few small greenbacks.

In publishing your letter, along with the painful but essential recommendation to see a lawyer, I am hoping it will serve as a timely warning to other elderly persons—to repose more trust in the funds they have and can hang on to, than in smooth-tongued children of theirs who are more distinguished for their selfishness than their substance. M. H.

When Divorcee Remarries, How Word Announcement?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have married a second time, after having been divorced, and I wish to send wedding announcements to friends and relatives in other cities. My husband and I wish to act as our own representatives announcing the marriage. Also, some of those who will receive announcements knew me by my maiden name, and others by my first married name. So how should the cards be worded? Incidentally, I do not wish to state the exact date or place of the wedding. Would the name of the city be sufficient to indicate the locality? Please advise me soon. NANCY.

No Correct Form For Withholding Facts

DEAR NANCY: In announcing her second marriage, the divorcee of mature years may properly employ the following form: "Mrs. Jane Brown Johnson and Mr. John Doe have the honor to announce their marriage on Saturday, the sixth of July, at Richmond, Virginia." (This assumes that her maiden name was Jane Brown, and that her first husband's surname was Johnson; and that, being divorced from him, she prefers not to identify herself with him to the extent of employing his baptismal name on the announcement.)

I have no suggestion as to how to phrase a wedding announcement without citing the date and place, since a major function of the card is to supply such information. If such details must be withheld, it probably would be just as well to send no announcement. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Glass Too Cold, Plastics Replace It for Furniture

The first translucent furniture that turned up was used in a fantastic movie production of a H. G. Wells' view of the future. The story goes that all the actors caught cold because the glass chairs were so cold. And that chill, it seems, is the catch to all-glass furniture. But plastic materials, which are as transparent as glass and not nearly so cold or so breakable, have since been developed to a practical point for furniture.

So now you can see through many chairs and tables—and even beds—that are presented in current exhibitions. Some of this plastic furniture is modern in design, other pieces borrow lines from baroque sources, while there seems to be quite a trend toward fabric swags, fringes, drapings and tuftings for the ornament theme of plastic furniture.

But don't think that glass takes a back seat just because it provides a cold seat. It still makes a bid for the frames of upholstered chairs. And it's grand for tables and spectacular for the pedestals of grand piano cases.

Today's Health Talk

Older Folks Inclined To Have Milder Form of Diabetes

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Most cases of diabetes occur in people over 40, and in fact, most occur in people over 50. We said in discussing diabetes in children that the younger the person, the more severe the diabetes in all likelihood. People over 40 are inclined to have a mild form of diabetes and those over 50 an even milder form, and those over 60, still milder form. Diabetes is simply an inability on the part of the body to utilize sugars and starches. The excess sugar runs off in the urine, and sugar in the urine is the most reliable sign of diabetes.

Use of Insulin

Middle-aged people with diabetes, as we say, having a mild form, can utilize about one-half or three-quarters as much sugar and starch as they could in health. Therefore they need, in most instances, only to cut down on sugar in their coffee, desserts, bread, starchy vegetables, such as potatoes and sweet fruits, and they will usually get along all right. Only a small proportion of them need insulin.

The tendency now is to give as much carbohydrate (sugar and starch food) as possible, even though occasionally some sugar appears in the urine. The patients are more comfortable that way and do not complain of hunger. They must however, stay within the limit of their glucose tolerance and not try to eat more starch than the body can absorb.

Typical meals for one day:

Breakfast

One-half cup grapefruit; 1 medium sized orange; 5 tablespoons oatmeal (cooked); 2 eggs; 4 tablespoons cream; 2 slices bread; 1 square butter.

Lunch

One egg and 1 egg white; 3 tablespoons 5 per cent vegetable; 3 tablespoons 10 per cent vegetable; ½ head lettuce; 2 level teaspoons mayonnaise; 2 slices bread; 1½ squares of butter.

Supper

One bowl clear meat broth;* 3 tablespoons 5 per cent vegetable; 3 tablespoons 10 per cent vegetable; ¼ pound lean meat, fish or chicken; 1 medium potato; 2 slices bread; 1½ squares butter; 1 medium sized orange.

Tea or coffee.

*If desired.

WHO, with a liking for drawing hasn't thought of being an illustrator?

The variety of the work appeals, as well as the good pay and the contacts with important people. But when necessity confines you to a routine job, it all seems a will-of-the-wisp dream. How can you make it reality?

One road that many successful illustrators followed is home study. Charts can show you how to analyze the figure in simple geometric forms, how to draw it in action.

Suppose your model poses as if walking rapidly forward. You analyze this action—keeping in mind that action is movement that takes the figure away from the vertical line of direction—that is the up-and-down line of the body when it stands erect.

With such simple guides, you learn to draw the live fluid figures demanded in modern illustration. The body itself you build on simple geometric forms—such as an oval for the head, cylinders for limbs. Then you add details, clothing.

Club Honors Dean of D. C. Showmen

Herbst Presented With Scroll, Radio On 72d Birthday

The Variety Club yesterday honored William P. Herbst on his seventy-second birthday, called him the dean of Washington showmen and joined him in considerable talk of the good old days when a three-reeler was a stellar attraction.

HERBST

A good sentimentalist, as all good showmen are, Herbst had to "get himself together" when the club, at the testimonial luncheon, gave him a scroll signed by all the members, and also a portable radio. But he launched his recollections then and most of the showmen he had known emerged as pretty good fellows.

A druggist back in 1909, Herbst conceived the idea of an open-air theater and had a good run that summer—all with such makeshift equipment as he could buy. Then, in December, 1909, he organized the Circle Amusement Co., and his theater, at 2105 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, is still functioning under his management.

The showmen put on a good show for their dean. Western Union messengers came in with a 6-foot telegram and sang the company's happy birthday song, and entertainers were brought from a local theater.

Among the more than 100 attending were A. Julian Brylawaski, president, Motion Picture Theater Owners of the District; Carter Barron, general manager, Loew's Theaters; John J. Payette, zone manager, Warner Theaters; Rudolph Berger, of M.-G.-M.; Sam Galanty, division manager, Columbia Pictures, and Eddie Fontaine, of Paramount Pictures. The luncheon was held at the Willard Hotel.

Md. Poultry Industry Expands Into Second Best Farm Crop

By the Associated Press

College Park, Md., July 8.—Marylanod's poultry industry "has developed until it is now the second most important single branch of agriculture in the State," Dr. Morley A. Jull, head of the University of Maryland poultry department, asserted today.

Poultry products produced last year were valued at $15,000,000, he declared. Considerable uantities of both eggs and poultry meat are shipped from Maryland to outside markets, he said.

Dr. Jull said, however, Maryland still is a deficit-producing State as far as egg production is concerned, with approximately $3,000,000 worth of eggs and more than $1,000,000 worth of poultry meat brought into Maryland from outside sources.

"In spite of the growth and development of the industry during recent years," he asserted, "poultry producers in Maryland suffer an estimated annual loss of $3,540,300."

Dr. Jull said more than $300,000 worth of hatching eggs and baby chicks were brought into Maryland.

The first shipment of commercial early Irish potatoes have moved from Maryland, officials of the Agricultural Marketing Service here, reported today.

Tunney Hurls 'Trojan Horse' Issue at AYC

Deceit and Evasion Used to Bar Delegates, Ex-Champion Charges

By International News Service

New York, July 8.—Gene Tunney tonight declared that with the closing sessions of the American Youth Congress convvention in Wisconsin went that organization's "last chance to demonstrate that it is not a Trojan horse of the Communist Party."

Tunney also charged that the congress used "deceit and evasion" to keep accredited delegates out of the convention.

His statement was issued on behalf of a new youth organization he plans to sponsor. This body will be along the same lines as the pro-American bloc which he supported at the convention in Lake Geneva, Wis., last week.

Hits at Stand on Soviet Union

Tunney said it is clear to him that the Youth Congress will not "take issue with the Soviet Union or depart from the orthodox Communist line." He added:

"They have condemned dictatorships, but when they say dictatorships they admit they do not mean Soviet Russia."

The new Youth organization, Tunney said, will be concerned with problems of American youth, "and not with foreign isms and questions better left to our State Department."

New President Asks Unity

Lake Geneva, Wis., July 8 (AP).—The American Youth Congress accepted "unity" as its watchword today in what President Jack McMichael, of Quitman, Ga., called "this crucial political year of 1940."

McMichael, who was reelected without opposition, said in his closing remarks before adjournment of the annual meeting yesterday that "this year we must have, above all else, unity of American youth—unity for peace, for keeping America out of foreign war, for jobs for unemployed youth, for preservation of our civil rights and liberties."

Red Cross Orders Its Relief Ship To Marseilles

The American Red Cross yesterday ordered its mercy ship, the S. S. McKeesport, to proceed from Bilboa, Spain, to Marseilles, France, where its $1,000,000 relief cargo will be unloaded for distribution in southern France.

Chairman Norman H. Davis announced at the same time that the total of the national war relief fund now stands at $18,234,381. Officials expressed confidence that the remainder of the $20,000,000 goal would be forthcoming in a short time.

Transportation difficulties between Spain and France made it necessary to order the McKeesport to Marseilles, Davis explained.

Senators Hear Complaint On Elgen Renomination

Commission Head Invited to Appear At Session Today

The insistence of the Potomac Electric Power Co. that Mrs. Myrtle de Montis, of 1346 Fairmont street northwest, pay a $45 deposit on three houses, was the basis of a complaint aired at length yesterday at a Senate hearing on the renomination of Riley E. Elgen as chairman of the Public Utilities Commission.

John A. Savage, retired electrical appliance salesman, of 1303 Fairmont street, talked for more than an hour about the fight over the deposit, which was carried to the courts, and about what he termed the failures of the commission.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of a subcommittee of the Senate District Committee, recessed the inquiry until 2 p.m. today, when Elgen will be given an opportunity to defend his record.

Tells of Resolution

When Senator McCarran asked if any other witnesses wished to testify in opposition to Elgen's confirmation, the only person who responded was Mrs. Margaret Hopkins Worrell.

She said that the Columbia Heights Citizens Association had adopted a resolution recommending that the Public Utilities Commission be abolished on the ground that it did not function in the public interest.

Senator McCarran asked her what agency the association had suggested should take over the commission's duties.

"I don't know," said Mrs. Worrell. "We haven't gone into that."

Mrs. de Montis complained at the outset that the commission had persistently refused to give her a hearing when she first resisted the demand of the power company that she make a deposit. Commission officials, he said, said they had no authority.

Both she and Savage testified that they were "insulted" and treated in "an insolent manner" when they visited the commission offices.

After reciting the history of the deposit case, in which the money was paid after the current had been cut off, Savage attacked the commission generally on the ground that the District government is being overcharged for its street lighting and the commission has allowed an excessive rate base for the benefit of the power company.

Credit Not an Issue

Senator McCarran pointed out that under the law and the procedure in most States a utility can demand a deposit whenever it considers the credit questionable and that it is the sole judge. Both Mrs. de Montis and Savage insisted that credit was not an issue in their case.

The subcommittee chairman also criticized the power company for the "insolence" of its personnel.

"I never saw such insolence as I have encountered there," he said. "If those folks were paid for their insolence, they would get good salaries."

Elgen, whose last appointment expired July 1, was renominated for a three-year term. As his term does not carry over, he has been off the District pay roll for a week.

'Alcoholics Anonymous' Given Police Court Case for Test

Washington's organization of reformed drunks, Alcoholics Anonymous, yesterday became the instrument of a judicial experiment.

Police Judge Walter J. Casey yesterday placed a 45-year-old inebriate under the group's dry wing for the "faith treatment" that the organization claims has saved more than 1,000 men from jails and insane asylums in the past five years.

The defendant had pleaded guilty to intoxication when W. P. Ames, representing the organization, stood up in court and asked Judge Casey for an opportunity to "take this man home and try to straighten him out."

He said that the prisoner was a graduate of a Western university and "basically is highly educated and should have good stuff in him."

Ames explained that the members of his organization by "faith in a higher being" had cured themselves of the liquor habit. Judge Casey released the prisoner in Ames' custody and ordered him to report back on the success of the experiment.

The judge then proceeded to mete out regulation treatment to the Monday morning quota of tipplers—169 others.

Witnesses Irk Rockville Residents

Increased Activity To Be Discussed At Board Meeting; Police Get Protests

Measures to cope with increased activity of Jehovah's Witnesses on Rockville, Md., streets will be discussed at a meeting of the Montgomery County Commissioners and Acting Chief of Police Roy Bodmer, it was learned last night.

Leading citizens of the town have informed police that they fear further outbreaks if the Witnesses continue efforts to sell their literature on the streets. Citizens told police approximately 200 Witnesses were on the streets of the town Saturday night, accosting passersby with literature which condemned other religious bodies, and that resentment in the town was high.

Acting Chief Bodmer last night admitted he was scheduled to confer with the commissioners today, but declined to make any comment concerning the situation.

Defense Has 10 Candidates

Defense Attorneys James H. Pugh and Donald Bowie, jr., today will present a list of ten leading Montgomery County citizens to the county commissioners and ask that one of them be selected as the civilian members of the trial board which will hear the cases of three county policemen tomorrow.

The three policemen are charged with neglect of duty in connection with a riot June 19, in which a mob invaded a meeting of the Witnesses and demanded that they salute the flag. When the Witnesses declined, claiming the salute to be a violation of their religious principles, the mob "tore up" the meeting place, even stamping on a Bible, testimony showed.

The three are scheduled to be tried at 10 a. m. tomorrow before the police trial board, composed of Police Civil Service Commissioner B. Peyton Whalen, County Commissioner R. W. Farmer, in charge of police, and a civilian member. Clarence H. Small had been appointed civilian member but is unable to serve because of illness.

Hundreds Offer Testimony

The list of candidates for the vacancy to be presented includes Judges Charles W. Woodward and Stedman Prescott, of the County Circuit Court; former County Commissioner Robert D. Hagner, Julian B. Waters, J. Vinson Peter, Thomas Garrett, Fred L. Lutes, John J. Dolan, the Rev. Ralph D. Smith or the Rev. J. Wesley Loftis.

Hundreds of county residents have offered to testify as character witnesses for Sergt. Jones, who is a veteran member of the force and has had an outstanding career as a police officer for the past 17 years. His planning of law enforcement work has resulted in collection of several thousands of dollars in huckster and similar fees, fellow members of the force say.

Defense Attorneys said they would produce only a few of the citizens who have offered to testify.

Included in the list of character witnesses summoned for Jones is Joseph B. Simpson, jr., member of counsel to the county commissioners, charged by law with the duty of prosecuting cases before the trial board.

The defense has summoned 65 witnesses to testify on behalf of Sergt. Jones, seven to testify in the case of Policeman Charles Peter and 11 on behalf of Policeman Leslie B. Thompson.

Col. W. A. Carleton And Mrs. Voorhees Licensed to Marry

Col. William A. Carleton, U. S. A., 70, veteran of the Spanish-American and World wars, and Mrs. Harieth F. Voorhees, a widow of 64, yesterday applied here for a license to marry. Both reside at the Wardman Park Hotel.

The two have known each other for 40 years, Mrs. Voorhees said. She and her former husband, the late Judge Harrison Voorhees, of Cape May, N. J., and Col. Carleton and his wife, who died two years ago, were old friends.

Col. Carlton, who retired from active service in the Army in 1929, has made his home in Washington since 1934. Mrs. Voorhees moved to Washington two years ago.

"We haven't set the date for the ceremony," said Mrs. Voorhees. But when it does take place, she added, the Rev. William Henry Denney will conduct it.

FineArts Board Approves AIA Library Design

Architects to Build On Grounds of Historic Octagon House

The Commission of Fine Arts yesterday approved a design for a library and administration building of the American Institute of Architects on the grounds of the historic Octagon House, Eighteenth street and New York avenue northwest.

The structure will be of Georgian style to harmonize with Octagon House, long famed as a "haunted house" until saved from ruin in 1902 by the American Institute of Architects, which set up its headquarters in it. The home of Col. John Tayloe, friend of Washington, the Octagon House became the unofficial White House after the burning of the Executive Mansion in 1814. It traditionally houses several celebrated ghosts.

Design for the library was drawn by D. Everett Waid, Dwight James Baum and Otto Eggers, associated architects.

The commission also approved designs and models by Miss Hildreth Meiere and Waylande Gregory for ceramics to be placed in the court of the new Municipal Center Building.

Full-sized models for sculptural reliefs, by John Gregory and Lee Lawrie, and for cheek blocks flanking the steps at the head of a terrace on John Marshall place, as part of the Municipal Center development, likewise were accepted. Official sanction was given to a third Municipal Center project, the design for the District library, to be built at John Marshall place, facing Pennsylvania avenue northwest. The design was executed by Nathan C. Wyeth, District municipal architect.

A design for a police memorial fountain, drawn by John J. Earley, to be erected near Indiana avenue, adjacent to the Municipal Center, was submitted to the commission. A fund of $10,000 has been raised for the memorial and Congress has authorized its erection.

The following also were approved:

Designs for Capital Transit bus terminals at Rosslyn and at Seventeenth street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast.

Proposed acquisitions for the Freer Art Gallery.

Fisherman Finds Body of D.C. Youth Drowned at Beach

The body of James Pannill, 20, of Washington, who drowned Saturday when he dived from a rowboat at Colonial Beach, Va., was recovered yesterday by Dewey Parkinson, a fisherman. Maryland State Police had posted $25 reward for the recovery of the body.

Pannill was diving from a boat off the beach with three companions when he failed to return to the surface. More than a dozen crafts have been dragging the river for the body.

A graduate of Eastern High School, the youth lived at 245 Twelfth street northeast.

Funeral services will be held today at 3 p. m. at the Zurhorst Funeral Home, Fourth and East Capitol streets. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Bad Cough Blamed For Fatal Plunge

The fatal plunge of a 60-year-old stonemason from his fourth-floor hotel room early yesterday morning was declared accidental in a certificate issued by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald.

The victim was identified by police as Charles Bentson, of Richmond, who had been employed on the Lafayette Building here. His body was found on the brick surface of an alley in the rear of the New York Hotel, 612 F street northwest, where he had been staying.

Coroner MacDonald learned the victim suffered from a chronic cough. MacDonald decided Bentson became afflicted with a coughing spell while at the window of his room and plunged accidentally.

Capital News In Brief

Police Entertain Boy Lost for Two Hours

Wanderlust yesterday led 8-year-old Forrest Stillion to Dupont Circle, the Third Precinct Police Station, a free supper and two hours of entertainment by Washington's bluecoats.

Forrest, who lives in Zanesville, Ohio, is visiting James M. Dollison, of 4803 Forty-eighth street northwest, with his mother and two sisters. Yesterday, he borrowed a bicycle from a neighbor and started east through the city to see the Nation's Capital.

But it was a hot day, and pedaling makes one thirsty, and home is enticing at supper time—if you know where it is. Forrest didn't. He was wandering aimlessly around Dupont Circle, pushing the bike before him, tears dropping from his eyes, when an unidentified man took him in hand and notified police.

Third Precinct policemen found it took a couple of sandwiches, a slab of apple pie, a glass of milk and a number of humorous antics to stem the flood of tears. Two hours later the boy's mother, Mrs. Fredda Stillion, notified police and the two were reunited.

36-Cent Milk Theft Nets Year in Jail

One year in jail was the sentence imposed yesterday in Police Court on a colored man convicted of stealing two quarts and a pint of milk—total value, 36 cents.

Weems was caught in the act of stealing the milk from a grocery store at 206 Massachusetts avenue northwest Sunday morning by Patrick Curtin, 2140 H street northwest, a milk truck driver. Curtin held Weems by the collar until Pvt. H. L. Sanford, of No. 1 Precinct, arrived to make the arrest.

Bus First Breaks Down, Then Passes Are Stolen

One set of troubles wasn't enough for Barton T. Scrivener, of 2147 O street northwest. When the Capital Transit bus he was driving yesterday developed motor trouble, Scrivener left it at Fourteenth street and Rhode Island avenue northwest to telephone the company garage for aid.

When he returned, he found $25 in passes missing.

House Votes 2 D. C. Bills, Last This Session

One Measure Sets Up Board to License, Regulate Undertakers

Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee yesterday completed action on District legislation by this Congress, he said, by obtaining quick approval of two Senate bills.

The measures, passed without opposition, sets up a board to regulate and license undertakers and embalmers in Washington and authorize the commissioners to furnish water free of charge to charitable institutions.

While some opposition from adjacent Maryland and Virginia undertakers had been directed at a companion bill, the Senate reciprocal provisions were said to be satisfactory.

Republican members of the House laughed when Randolph, calling attention to the growth of the National Capital as revealed in the preliminary census report, said he did not know the reason.

The proposed Scott Circle underpass along Sixteenth street came in for criticism from Representative Paul Shafer (Republican), of Wisconsin, on the ground that valuable trees would be destroyed. Randolph said that he agreed with Shafer but added that the Commissioners had promised to hold a hearing on the issue.

All District bills pending on the House calendar will be left intact and will die with adjournment as a result of the cessation of District legislative activity. All are controversial, and House leaders were understood to be opposed to District affairs taking up an extensive time.

Letter From Mitchell

Harry B. Mitchell, president of the Civil Service Commission, yesterday addressed a letter to Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee asking that the Nichols bills providing for the establishment of a municipal stadium and recreation center be amended so that personnel would be selected from civil service lists.

Randolph said that he would reply that no action is contemplated on the measure at this session of Congress.

Wabash returned home yesterday, a cut under his chin the only memento of an eight-story fall and a night in a ventilator shaft.

The nearly 3-month-old kitten fell into the shaft from the roof of an apartment house at 900 Nineteenth street northwest Sunday while its owner, Grace D. Beaton, of 705 Eighteenth street northwest, was sun-bathing nearby.

The elevator operator heard cries and notified Miss Beaton. The shaft grill work was removed from an opening into a first floor apartment. Inside sat Wabash, perched on a 4-inch ledge.

Ruffing to Face Derringer or Walters Today

The Washington Post Sports

33,000 Fans To Witness All-Star Game

Yankees Dominate American Line-up in Annual Classic Today At Sportsman's Park

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, July 8.—It will be the New York Yankees representing the American League again tomorrow against the pick of the National League talent in the eighth annual All-Star spectacle.

Fans congregating here tonight for the big midsummer baseball show were jarred off balance by Manager Joe Cronin's selection of Pitcher Red Ruffing and four others of the fourth-place Yankees to start the game at 1:30 p. m. (Central standard time) in Sportsman's Park.

Neither the Detroit Tigers nor the Cleveland Indians, first and second place clubs in the junior circuit, were accorded a single starting assignment by Cronin, although he said the expected 33,000 fans would see Lefty Al Milnar of the Indians and Buck Newsom of the Tigers in three-inning mound appearances.

Walters or Derringer

Deacon Bill McKechnie, manager of the National League forces, countered with stars from six of the eight teams in his league, headed by a battery from his own Cincinnati Reds.

McKechnie still refused tonight to say whether big Paul Derringer or slender Bucky Walters would be his opening pitcher but named Ernie Lombardi to catch.

The decision of Cronin to use a right-handed pitcher was responsible for McKechnie including three left-handed batters in his line-up—Arky Vaughn, of the Pittsburgh Pirates, at shortstop; Johnny Mize, of the St. Louis Cardinals, at first base, and the veteran Mel Ott, of the New York Giants, in rightfield.

Use of Mize, the National League batting champion, ahead of his own Frank McCormick was the most difficult choice for McKechnie to make. McCormick, a right-hander, has been batting about 20 points better than Mize and had never missed an inning of All-Star competition since breaking into the majors.

Undecided on Pitchers

The selections of Chicago's Bill Herman at second, Brooklyn's Harry Lavagetto at third, and Joe Medwick, of Brooklyn, and Terry Moore, of St. Louis, in the outfield were fairly obvious, although he might have gained additional left-handed hitting strength in his outfield by naming Joe Moore, of the Giants.

Besides refusing steadfastly to announce a definite starting pitcher, McKechnie also said he did not know which hurlers he would choose to finish out the game and would be governed by the "tide of battle."

Cronin's choices were nothing short of radical, although he emphasized his line-up was "subject to change."

For his leadoff batter and third baseman the scrappy pilot of the Red Sox named Cecil Travis of the Washington Senators, who was not even chosen on the original squad of 25 American League stars. Travis got into the game when Red Rolfe, of the Yanks withdrew because of injuries. However, the Senator is slugging a potent .346, while Ken Keltner, of the Indians, the other possible choice, is batting .329.

A Surprising Move

But if this effort to get batting power looked entirely reasonable, the naming of New York's Joe Gordon, batting .245, is a bit surprising when Second Baseman Ray Mack, of Cleveland, is hitting .318. Likewise Bill Dickey, who will catch Ruffing, is batting .221 compared to .331 for Frank Hayes, of Philadelphia, and .295 for Rollie Hemsley, of Cleveland.

Cronin, in selecting his outfield, also ignored the best batter on his squad, his own Lou Finney who is hitting .359, and passed over the powerful Hank Greenberg, of Detroit, a fixture in recent All-Star lineups.

The only conclusion that could be drawn from the starting selections was that both managers intended to substitute freely and McKechnie stated frankly that he intended to use every player on his squad if possible.

The American League was established as a heavy favorite to win. James Carroll, St. Louis commissioner, quoted 1 to 2 against the junior leaguers and 6 to 5 against the Nationals. Considerable American League money was in evidence, but little backing was found for the Nationals in spite of their success in beating the Americans 2 to 1 in an exhibition All-Star tussle at Tampa, Fla., last spring.

In the regular midsummer series the Americans have won five out of seven.

Armacost, Baltimore Salesman, Shoots 147 For Medal Honors as 109 Seek Spots in National Public Links Play in Detroit

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

John (Buck) Armacost, a 22-year-old Baltimore salesman, won medalist honors over seven other National Public Links qualifiers yesterday at East Potomac as Washington and the Monumental city representatives each gained four berths to the Detroit tournament.

Armcost finished late, after the medal had already been presented to 24-year-old Kenneth Zent, a local F. W. A. worker who finished with 148, a total that looked plenty good at the time. However, the blond visitor played the last nine holes in one under par for his medal winning 147 total, three over par.

The District's two-time public links champion, 22-year-old Andy Oliveri, who works in the experimental laboratory at Langley Field Va., tied two Baltimore boys for third place with a 150 total, despite a 42 on the third nine. Oliveri was the morning round leader with a par 72 but three bad drives cost him six shots on the out nine in the afternoon before he settled down for a 36 and 78.

Morris Wins Playoff

Other Washington qualifiers were John Jankowski, branch manager of the Boys Club of Washington and a former Catholic University fullback, with 151, and Bob Morris, Social Security Board employee, who won a playoff after tying two East Potomac teammates at 152. Bobby Burton lost on the first hole and Roy Smith, spring tournament champion, on the third, without a

Newsom Is Mad And Will Pass Up Star Game

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, July 8.—Buck Newsom, winner of 12 consecutive games for the Detroit Tigers, exploded today when he heard he hadn't been named to start for the American League in tomorrow's All-Star game.

"With my record I don't have to be a relief pitcher for anybody," he shouted. "I've been named to four All-Star games and spent every one in the bull pen. But they can let some other guy work the whole nine innings for all I care. Bobo won't be there."

The threat of the voluble right-hander to absent himself from the proceedings was laughed off by persons who have heard him spiel before.

Paul Golfs, Ernie 'Snoozes'

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, July 8.—Paul Derringer, the big right-hander for the Cincinnati Reds who is a probable starting pitcher for the National Leaguers in tomorrow's All-Star game, spent today playing golf.

In direct contrast was the activity of Ernie Lombardi, Reds' catcher. The only player to gain the limelight by taking a "snooze" in the World Series, Lombardi spent the day in the shade of a potted palm in a hotel lobby.

Tomorrow's appearance will be the first for Joe (Ducky) Medwick in a Brooklyn uniform before the St. Louis fans. Manager Bill McKechnie of the National League All-Stars tucked him into his old leftfield slot in the starting line-up.

Rapid Robert Feller, the Cleveland ace, changed his plans and did not make an airplane dash to his Iowa home en route from Ohio to game site. His parents decided to come here.

A majority of the players are becoming air-minded. Rollie Hemsley, Feller's pet catcher at Cleveland, and his daughter arrived via the airplanes today and rumors were current several of the Yanks entrants would fly in tomorrow.

Time really does fly in baseball—Tommy Bridges is the only hurler among the 14 listed to have won a previous All-Star game. And Lon Warneke, the Cardinal work horse who has starred in three previous shows, is tomorrow's batting practice flinger.

Rumor: Gabby Hartnett has become convinced that the present Cub infield won't do and only Billy Herman, at second base, is sure of a job come next spring.

In reward for their good playing this season, all the St. Louis Browns came back from Detroit today at the invitation of President Don Barnes and at the expense of the club. The team will play in New York Thursday.

Detectives raided a hotel on the Illinois side of the Mississippi River and arrested two scalpers who were getting $3.85 for $1.42 tickets. They pleaded guilty and were fined $25.

Challedon, Many Stings Race Today

Brann's '39 Champion Makes 1st '40 Start At Suffolk Downs

By the Associated Press

Boston, July 8.—Mighty Challedon, W. L. Brann's 1939 champion of the turf, will make his first start of the year tomorrow when he matches speed with the Le Mar Stock Farm's Many Stings in a two-horse, mile and a sixteenth race for a $1,500 purse at Suffolk Downs.

This overnight event was arranged by Racing Secretary Charles J. McLennan to give Challedon's handlers an opportunity to condition their great thoroughbred for the $50,000 added Massachusetts Handicap on July 17. Many Stings also has been nominated for that richest event on the New England racing program.

Because Challedon's race with Many Stings merely is a conditioner, the Suffolk Downs management will not permit pari-mutuel wagering on their speed duel. It has been inserted into tomorrow's eight-race card as an added attraction.

Challedon was assigned 128 pounds to Many Stings' 118, but the Brann star has been given the top impost of 130 by McLennan for the Massachusetts, which drew 45 nominations.

George D. Widener's Eight Thirty has been assigned 126 pounds and the Belair Stud's Fighting Fox, which won last year's Massachusetts from a field that included Pompoon, Burning Star and Challedon, drew the third heaviest burden of 122 pounds.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

The All-Star game may be a delectable treat for the fans, but the evidence is that it's a mild pain in the neck to the league managers. At least they don't feel compelled to glamourize the proceedings to the extent of saving their best pitchers for All-Star duty. They are not forgetting that the game doesn't count in the pennant race.

POVICH

In the American League particularly the managers aren't straining themselves to cooperate with the grandiose pitching plans announced for the game three weeks ago. At that time seven of the league's best pitchers were assigned to the All-Star team. It was a formidable array. But over the week-end it has begun to look considerably less formidable. Only one pitcher in the lot will be thoroughly rested for his best effort when the team takes the field.

Manager Oscar Vitt, at Cleveland, apparently didn't deem the All-Star game important enough to keep Bob Feller out of action yesterday. The All-Star game meant less than yesterday's game with the White Sox. The fact that Feller was the American League's greatest guarantee of winning the game and that if he does pitch on Tuesday it will be with only one day's rest cut no ice with Vitt. The Indians are in that pennant fight.

There is no reason, however, why Vitt should be singled out for any censure. Virtually every other manager in the league is playing the same kind of hand and unlike Vitt most of 'em do not have clubs fighting for the pennant. Bucky Harris, for example, sent Dutch Leonard to the mound yesterday and is back with the All-Star game. More important to Harris was the possibility of checking the Nats' current losing streak.

Manager Del Baker, of the Tigers, did not consider he had any great duty toward the All-Star game either. The Tigers are hovering around the lead and more important to Baker was the use of Buck Newsom and Tommy Bridges in their regular turn over the week-end and profoundly sorry if they wouldn't be rested for the All-Star game. Baker saw his first duty as one to the Detroit bosses, the Detroit fans, the Detroit team and, incidentally, to Manager Del Baker.

Manager Joe McCarthy didn't hesitate to use Red Ruffing on Saturday against the Athletics, but there may be some excuse in his case. McCarthy will, nevertheless, be providing the American League with the only pitcher on the club who will be fully rested for an effort this afternoon. He did save Monte Pearson for All-Star duty.

This year the National League managers are doing a bit better by their All-Star line-up. Manager Bill McKechnie of the Reds will have Bucky Walters thoroughly rested for an effort today, and Manager Bill Terry will have Carl Hubbell available. The Cubs' Bill French will also be pitching in turn. Of course the fact that the pitchers are restricted to three-inning duty in the All-Star game is a factor that may minimize the action of the American League managers, but it scarcely excuses them.

The suspicion is that the National League managers have been given the word by higher-ups to make a deliberate effort to reserve their pitchers for All-Star duty. The National League is chafing no little at their reverses in five of the seven All-Star games to date and are frantic to restore league prestige with another All-Star victory. The league's brass hats are in a mood to frown unofficially on any action by the managers that might imperil N. L. chances of winning this afternoon.

At Cleveland in the 1935 All-Star game, President Ford Frick, of the National League, was outspoken in his censure of the National League managers who had used their stars on the Sunday before the game. Carl Hubbell and Dizzy Dean were not rested for the All-Star effort with the consequence that Manager Frankie Frisch was forced to start Bill Walker, a second flight hurler. In the first inning the American Leaguers climbed aboard the inept Walker for three runs and won the ball game. Jimmy Foxx slugged a homer with two on.

At Boston, in 1936, when the National League scored its first All-Star victory after three straight defeats, Bill Terry managed the game cutely for the N. L. He left his starting line-up in the game for the duration in contrast to Manager Joe McCarthy, of the American Leaguers, who used nearly all of his 25 players. The A. L. was considerably miffed at the National League tactics and McCarthy declared, "Am I supposed to try to win this game or to give the fans a show by using all of the players?" That is a question, incidentally, that never has been settled to the satisfaction of most people.

Detroit A. L. Choice For '41 All-Star Game

Endorse Play for Permitting Fans To Pick Players; National League Meets Tonight; 'Beanings' Discussed

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, July 8.—The American League voted today to award the 1941 All-Star baseball game to the Detroit Tigers and passed a motion in favor of continuance of the mid-summer fixture with some plan for permitting the fans to select the players.

It suggested that the problem of working out a suitable method for public voting on the squads be left to the major league advisory committee composed of Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis and League Presidents Ford Frick and William Harridge.

The game was conceived by a Chicago newspaper in 1933 with fans choosing the players, but after 1935 selections, which the major leagues found unsatisfactory, the managers did the selecting.

The National League was to meet tonight and undoubtedly would discuss the action of the American League which naturally calls for joint handling.

Seven of the eight American League clubs were represented at the meeting, Connie Mack of the Philadelphia Athletics being absent.

The league considered the proposal for batters to wear helmets to avoid serious consequences from "beanings" by pitched balls, but decided that this question should be left to the individual clubs and players.

Yankee Club Purchase Is Expected Soon

Cleveland Broker Is Negotiating for a Syndicate for Team

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, July 8.—Smith Davis, Cleveland broker, confirmed today a report he is "involved" in negotiations of a syndicate to purchase the New York Yankees baseball Club.

New York papers said Sunday that Postmaster General James A. Farley would retire from national politics to head the Yankee organization. The Times said former Gov. James M. Cox of Ohio was a principal backer in the projected purchase, but Cox denied he was in any way "involved in any deal concerning the New York Yankees."

Davis negotiated the purchase by Cox of the Atlanta (Ga.) Journal several months ago.

"My position is like that of Mr. Farley concerning the third term issue," said Smith. "I can't talk."

Davis, one-time backfield star on Western Reserve University football teams, said he spent "most of last week" in New York.

"A deal may be announced in the very near future," Smith added. "With the national political situation what it is, it is a very delicate state of affairs."

Cocoa Kid Wins Verdict Over Leto In Baltimore Ring

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Md., July 8.—The Cocoa Kid, No. 1 welterweight challenger of the world, caught up with his old jinx—Jimmy Leto—tonight at Carlin's Park, winning a close decision in a bruising 10-round match before 3,500 fans.

Cocoa, who meets Phil Furr, Washington, D. C., welterweight, next Monday night at Griffith Stadium, won the fight in a great last-round stand.

With the result hinging on the final round, the colored fighter cut loose with a blistering two-fisted attack that cut Leto to ribbons. Leto's nose and face were a mass of blood at the finish.

It was Cocoa Kid's forty-fourth straight victory, and in winning he atoned for two previous defeats at the hands of Leto, a protege of Al Weill.

Willie Herbert Paces Advance In D. C. Women's Tennis Play

Top-Seeded Star Routs Miss Echols

Anne Harrison and Cynthia Olmstead Join Champion in 3d Round; No Upsets

By Jack Munhall

Willie O'Steen Herbert, coming back after losing her City of Washington title last month, yesterday led two unseeded players into the third round as the District of Columbia Women's Open tennis tournament opened at Columbia County Club.

Mrs. Herbert, defending champion and seeded first, spanked Le Jeanne Echols, 15-year-old Silver Spring girl and recent winner of the Baltimore City Open girls' title, 6—0, 6—1. The other pair moving into the round of 16 were Anne Harrison, dangerous Baltimore entry, and Cynthia Olmstead, highly touted Annapolis (Md.) player, whose real ability has yet to be tested in these parts.

Miss Harrison Impressive

Miss Harrison scored an impressive 6—0, 6—1 victory over City of Washington Girls' Champion Margot Parsons, and Miss Olmstead defeated Margaret Graham, one of Columbia's better women players, after a tough struggle, 3—6, 6—3, 7—5.

Third-seeded Margo Lee, former Vassar star who upset Mrs. Hebert for the City of Washington title, advanced as easily as did Mrs. Herbert, beating Lisa Bloede, of Baltimore, 6—1, 6—1, in the first round. The other two seeded stars, second-ranked Charlotte Decker, of Washington, experienced difficulty in their first round matches.

Nearest approach of the day to an upset developed in Miss Dayette's match with Columbia's Elinor Finckel, who bowed only after a torrid struggle, 6—3, 11—9, the second set being one of the longest on record for local women's tournament match in recent years.

Meantime, youthful Miss Decker was being extended by Mrs. Dorette Miller, veteran former District women's champion, before triumphing, 6—2, 6—4.

Close, well played matches were the order on opening day. Marian Prichard, Joan Bransford and Frances Carter, three of the strong unseeded contenders, were carried to three sets before defeating Helen Davis, Barbara Conard and Roselyn Pope, respectively.

"Test" Slated Today

Feature of today's schedule and the only third-round match scheduled will be the meeting of Mrs. Herbert with Anne Harrison, an encounter which should go far toward settling two important questions—(1) whether Mrs. Herbert has regained her last year's form, which was missing in her City of Washington play, and (2) how good is Baltimore's Miss Harrison. They are to meet at 2:30.

Otherwise there will be five second-round matches and three first round consolations.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS

FIRST ROUND—Margo Lee defeated Lisa Bloede, 6—1, 6—1; Frances Rowan defeated Hazel Bishop, 7—5, 6—0; Elizabeth Sowers defeated Mrs. James Karrick, 6—4, 6—2; Anne Dayette defeated Elinor Finckel, 6—3, 11—9; Charlotte Decker defeated Dorette Miller, 6—2, 6—4; Marian Prichard defeated Helen Davis, 6—3, 2—6, 6—3; Joan Bransford defeated Barbara Conard, 1—6, 6—4, 6—3; Frances Carter defeated Roselyn Pope, 6—3, 6—3.

SECOND ROUND—Willie Herbert defeated LaJeanne Echols, 6—0, 6—1; Anne Harrison defeated Margot Parson, 6—0, 6—1; Cynthia Olmstead defeated Margaret Graham, 3—6, 6—3, 7—5. Eleanor Voith drew bye.

Strong Field In D. C. Girl's Tennis Tourney

Baltimore girls were awarded the three top seedings in the first annual District of Columbia Girls' Open tennis tournament starting this morning at Columbia Country Club.

A field of 30 players, one of the strongest ever assembled for a girls' tournament here, will seek the title. Besides the Baltimore entries there are several strong contenders representing Annapolis.

Isabel Harvey, who yesterday defeated Helen Harrison for the Baltimore City girls' championship, was top-seeded, with Miss Harrison, last year's Middle Atlantic girls' champion, second, and Betty Simpson, third. Margot Parsons, of Washington, winner of the recent City of Washington tournament which was open to the city and its suburbs, rounds out the ranked list in fourth position.

Betty Jacob, who won last year's District girls' closed tournament, is unseeded, but should cause plenty of trouble. Her unranked status is the result of her early elimination in the City of Washington tourney.

Among the other unseeded players considered worthy of watching are La Jeanne Echols, of Silver Spring, winner of the current City of Baltimore girls' open tournament, and Shirley Coombs, of Washington, a consistent semifinalist or finalist in tournaments here last year.

TODAY'S PAIRINGS

FIRST ROUND—10:30 a. m., Caroline Boyce vs. Lucia Shamon, Shirley Coombs vs. Nancy Peterson, Isabel Harvey vs. Adele Pugh, Barbara Levering vs. Marjorie Dawson, Betty Simpson vs. Bettita Martins, Betty Mitchell vs. Frances Willmont.

11:00 a. m., Jean Chatterley vs. Betty Jacob, Janice Goldberg vs. Anne Cullen, Marjorie Ellison vs. Ruth Johnson, Marjorie Brookings vs. Judy Riley.

12:30 p. m., Felicia Miller vs. Virginia Lloyd, Julie Fiske vs. Jeanne Balabes; La. Jeanne Echols vs. Betty Simpson, Margot Parson vs. Phyllis Smith. Lucy Tyler and Helen Harrison drew byes.

SECOND ROUND—3:00 p. m., Helen Harrison vs. winner Marjorie Ellison-Ruth Johnsen match; Lucy Tyler vs. winner Betty Jacob-Jean Chatterly match.

Parker Better Than Ever, Coach Says

Frankie to Defend Spring Lake Tennis Title Starting Today

By the Associated Press

Spring Lake, N. J., July 8.—Frankie Parker, the Nation's second-ranking amateur tennis player, will finally display a real forehand—you can take Coach Mercer Beasley's word for it—when he opens tomorrow's defense of his title in the Spring Lake Bathing and Tennis Club invitation tournament.

Furthermore, added Beasley, although Parker, who is top-seeded, hasn't won the number of tournaments he had at this time last year, "he's a better player than ever."

The veteran Princeton University mentor who found Frankie on the public courts at Milwaukee and made him a Davis Cup star, explained it this way:

"You'll remember that when Parker played here last year, he had a slight hitch in his serve and his forehand was unsteady, too. But he really hits the ball now, he can put the ball in play just as hard and fast as any player around, and you won't find his opponents trying to play him strictly on his forehand game any more. There really isn't a weak point in his game."

Major obstacles to Parker's hopes for a sixth consecutive title here are expected to be the other seeded players—Archie Henderson, Chapel Hill, N. C., second; Gardnar Mulloy, Miami, Fla., runner-up last year, third; Ted Schroeder, Los Angeles, Calif., fourth; Jack Kramer, Belvedere Gardens, Calif., fifth, and Owen Anderson, Hollywood, Calif., sixth.

The foreign seeded players are Ladislav Hecht, of New York, former Czecho-Slovakian Davis Cup player, and G. Lyttleton Rogers, of Ireland.

Another competitor is the veteran Wilmer Allison, national champion in 1934.

Isabel Harvey Wins Baltimore Girls Crown

Baltimore, July 8 (AP).—Isabel Harvey captured the Baltimore City tennis championship for girls under 18 today by defeating her schoolmate, Helen Harrison, 16, in straight sets at the Suburban Club, 6—3, 6—2. Miss Harvey was runner-up in the under 15-year-old competition last year.

Scalzo Fights Ivy Tonight For Title

N. B. A.'s Feather Champion to Defend Crown in Hartford

By the United Press

Hartford, Conn., July 8.—Petey Scalzo, of New York, recognized as world featherweight champion by the National Boxing Association, was a slight favorite tonight to defeat Bobby (Poison) Ivy, a Hartford newsboy who learned to fight on the streets of this town, in a 15-round championship fight tomorrow night.

This city of featherweight champions was excited over the encounter and a crowd of more than 7,000 was expected to pour into Bulkeley Stadium and contribute a gate of $11,000. Louis (Kid) Kaplan and "Bat" Battalino, other champions developed in Hartford, have been boxing with Ivy during the last two weeks. They have taught him the tricks they used in bringing titles to Hartford.

Ivy's a Father

Ivy is 23, father of one child and a tough fighter who learned how to handle his fists protecting his corner from other newsboys. Five years ago he began fighting as an amateur and turned professional shortly after.

This "poison ivy kid" was a virtual unknown a few months ago. But a tremendous left hook to the body earned him a name. He is a slow starter and rarely gets warmed up until the sixth or seventh round. It is reported that in order to offset this handicap, Ivy will shadow-box four or five rounds in his dressing room tomorrow night before stepping into the ring.

May Fight Here

Scalzo was named featherweight champion by the N. B. C. about three months ago after he defeated Frankie Covelli at Washington. The contracts in tomorrow's fight provide for Ivy to give Scalzo a return match in Washington if the title changes hands.

Scalzo said today that he expects his superior boxing skill to carry him to victory. He knows that Ivy is a dangerous hitter and has been cautioned not to mix it up if he can help it.

The fighters will weigh in at noon tomorrow. Neither is expected to have any trouble making the featherweight limit of 126 pounds.

Armstrong's Manager Fights Weight-Limit

Mead to Seek Removal of 140-Pound Restriction So Hank Can Defend Welter Title Against Lightweight King Jenkins

By the United Press

New York, July 8.—Eddie Mead, manager of Welterweight Champion Henry Armstrong, announced today that he will ask the boxing commission to remove the 140-pound weight limit from the July 17th fight with Lightweight Champion Lew Jenkins and make the bout for the welter title.

"I am convinced now that Armstrong cannot pare down to 140 pounds and still be in good shape for the fight," Mead said. "If the commission makes it a title bout, Armstrong can come in anywhere under the 147-pound welter limit. And the distance would be extended from 12 to 15 rounds."

When Jenkins' pilot, Hymie Caplin, learned of Mead's announcement, he bellowed, "Armstrong's gotta come in at 140, according to his contract, or there won't be any fight, and I'll take up his $2,500 forfeit. We're not interested in the welter title. Mead thought we were suckers when we accepted the Armstrong match, but now he finds he's the sucker and he's tryin' to cry his way out of a mess.

"Besides, maybe Mead figures that if the commission makes it a title fight, Armstrong can demand the champion's end and get 37½ per cent instead of the 27½ that he and Jenkins are now contracted to receive. Mead's a smarty, but he isn't goin' to jockey us around. If Armstrong will be weak at 140 pounds that'll be swell. The weaker the better. Jenkins'll knock his brains out."

Chairman John J. Phelan, of the boxing commission, said Mead had not communicated with him yet, hence he could make no decision.

"Offhand, it seems that Armstrong must live up to the 140-pound agreement which is included in the official contract on file with the commission," Phelan said. "You know we have a rule which prevents the champion in one class from challenging for another title without first giving up the title that he holds. Under this rule, Jenkins would be forced to give up his lightweight championship if he wished to fight for Armstrong's welterweight title."

Caplin said, "there's as much chance of Jenkins giving up his lightweight crown as there is of me running for President. We don't want the welterweight title. The lightweight division is the money division. Besides, Jenkins is a natural lightweight. He'll scale about 134 pounds for the Armstrong fight. That'll give Armstrong 6 pounds advantage. Isn't that enough?"

Cubs Plow Under The Moline Plows, Their Farm Hands

By the Associated Press

Moline, Ill., July 8.—The Chicago Cubs defeated the Moline Plows, their farm club, in the Three-Eye League, today, 8 to 7, in a free-hitting exhibition game before 1,200 spectators.

The Cubs got all their runs in the first four innings. Herb Schmiel, who was graduated from a Chicago high school a few days ago, pitched the last five innings for Moline, giving the National Leaguers two hits.

The Cubs used three regular pitchers, Coach George Uhle and First Baseman Phil Cavaretta on the mound.

Higbe's Temper Is Beating Phillies And Doc Prothro Is a Very Sad Man

Fireballer Blows Up When He Figures Decisions Are Bad

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 8.—What's the matter with Walter Kirby Higbe?

The fireball righthander of the Phillies, who on several occasions has been hailed as the National League's Bob Feller, won only two of his nine starts since May 30. One was an eight-hit performance against the Reds; the other a six-hit job against the Giants last Saturday.

It isn't only that Higbe has been losing, but the way he has lost that worries Manager Doc Prothro and President Gerry Nugent.

The good Doctor predicts Higbe will "come around," but it is evident he is concerned over the way the former Cub rookie blew up in games against the Bees, Pirates and Cardinals.

On July 2 the Phils and Bees were tied, 2 to 2, coming into the ninth. The Bees, with two out, filled the bases. Then Buddy Hassett singled, starting a six-run rally, and the Phils had lost another.

Much the same thing happpened when Pittsburgh scored six runs in the seventh on June 25, to win, 9 to 7. The Cardinals banged over five runs in the eighth on June 16 to win, 9 to 3.

In all three games the Phils were in the midst of the battle until

The Good Doctor Is Confident, However, Star Will Be Winner

Higbe exploded following a real or fancied grievance. In the game against the Pirates he thought he had struck out an enemy batter. Instead the umpire called his pitch a ball.

"I got so mad," Higbe said afterward, "I didn't know what I was doing."

Against the cards the Phils trailed, 3-4, as they came to bat in the seventh. They filled the bases with one out. The next two men fanned. As he walked to the mound Higbe appeared "disgusted." The Cards tagged him for five runs.

Higbe tells you, "I'll start winning again. I'm just in a slump. You know I've got to bear down on every pitch. The boys don't get many runs for me."

It's true the Phils don't score many runs for Higbe or for that matter any other twirler.

In considering Higbe's case it is interesting to note the comment of the great Walter Johnson. He said:

"I figure I lost many games because an umpire's decision went against me but I also figure I won a lot of games when the decision favored me."

6 Kansas City Players Named For Star Game

American Assn.'s Big Contest Carded At Blues' Park July 17

Columbus, Ohio, July 8.—Six members of the league-leading Kansas City Blues, five from the second-place Minneapolis Millers, three from St. Paul and two each from Columbus and Indianapolis make up the 1940 American Association All-Star team.

Louisville, Milwaukee and Toledo failed to win a berth as the association chapter of baseball writers selected the squad which will meet the league-leaders at Kansas City, Wednesday night, July 17. The six Blues named to the All-Star squad will be replaced by members of the second team, while Tom Sheehan, Minneapolis manager who will pilot the selected outfit, will choose two others to round out the quota of 20.

Three members of the All-Star squad were unanimous selections. They were Third Sacker Gil English, of St. Paul; Shortstop Phil Rizzuto, of Kansas City, and Catcher Otto Denning, of Minneapolis.

The closest scrap came at first base, where Phil Weintraub, of Minneapolis, nosed out Johnny Sturm, of Kansas City, by one vote. At second Gerry Priddy, of Kansas City, was an easy winner, although not a unanimous selection as he was a year ago. Utility infield berths went to Jack Saltzgaver, Kansas City handy man, and Bob Reis, of St. Paul, who does everything but catch.

The Walker boys, Harvey of Minneapolis, and Harry, of Columbus, topped the outfield ballot fight, with other fly-chasing berths going to Harvey's Minneapolis teammates, Robert Estalella and Ab Wright.

Trailing Denning for the second and third string catching berths were Johnny Riddle, veteran Kansas City receiver, and Dick West, Indianapolis youngster. Two southpaw pitchers and three righthanders were selected, with the portsiders heading the parade. Harry Brecheen, of Columbus, drew the most votes, followed by Bob Logan, of Indianapolis. Rounding out the mound staff were Bob Logan, of Indianapolis, and Ernie Bonham and John Lindell, of Kansas City.

The six players to replace the Kansas City selections will be named Tuesday, along with Sheehan's two nominees for the seventh annual all-star clash.

Homer in 9th Tops Bees for Toledo

Toledo, Ohio, July 8.—Tony Criscola cracked a ninth-inning home run today to give the Toledo Mud Hens of the American Association a 10-to-9 win over the Boston Bees in an exhibition game. Two men were on base at the time of Criscola's blow, which climaxed a four-run uprising by the Hens in the final frame.

The clubs made 11 errors between them with the National Leaguers building a 9-3 lead in the first six innings before the brood got the range.

CONSIDINE

Ferndale, N. Y., July 8.—The moon had come up over Grossinger's and the young lovers had gone off to Eagle Rock. The insect life in the leafy countryside set up a hypnotic hum. Lew Jenkins, the lightweight champion of the world, was feeling purty lonesome for the Texas belle who is his helpmeet, as he sat in a deep chair in front of his cottage. So he whipped out his git-tar and banged away with a mournful tune about unrequited love on the lone pray-ree.

The mournful melody must have reminded him of his youth. For he began to talk about it, a vacant stare in his sunken eyes, a nervous hand running restlessly through the mop of unmanageable hair which sprouts from the top of his boney head.

Next week he is going to earn something like $25,000 for a maximum of 45 minutes work. It will be his first important money and it doesn't seem as real to him as the bitter things he has known. Not as real as the lickings he used to take from an uncle for not picking enough cotton; not as real as working from dawn to dusk in a steaming cotton field (from the time he was 12 years old) for $1 a day; not as real as his two years in the Army, cleaning out mule stalls, shoeing cavalry horses for $20 a month—half of which the Army sent home to his mother.

"Kinda hard for me to believe there is a place like this," he said. "Ah 'member some of them fights ah had when ah was in the Army. Once ah gotta match in a place called Silver City, N. Mex., 160 miles from camp. Got up at fo' o'clock that morning, fed a hundred horses, cleaned out them stalls and worked around until noon or 1 o'clock. Then ah got in an old bus and rode that 160 miles to this place, fought 10 rounds, and come back. Got back just as dawn broke, and went right back to work. But ah made $10 on the fight.

"Ten dollars wasn't so bad. Ah've fought for five bucks, and glad to get it. Tough fights, too, handling myself. Not in condition to fight, and mending my own cuts. See these here puffs over my eyes. They say ah cut easy, and ah do, and ah guess the reason for that is ah never bothered must about fixing myself up when ah used to get cut. Used to take the cut with these two fingers, squeeze her together and stick a hunk of adhesive over it and let 'er heal. Ah had a laugh when one of them New York commissioners said to me—that was before the Ambers fight—he said ah should be careful about a little scratch ah got on my eyes. Made me think of some of them cuts ah used to get and keep fighting with them, and fix 'em myself, and maybe get 15 bucks for the fight, if ah was lucky. Made me laugh."

The great embarrassment of his life apparently is his kayo by Pete Lello. "He butt me and opened up a bad cut over my left eye," Lew explained. "Butt me bad. And finally ah lose so much blood ah'm no-account even though ah knocked him down in the sixth. He knocked me down twice in the seventh, and ah'm bleeding real bad. They should'a stopped the fight even before that. But soon as ah went down the referee rushes over and held up his hand, and a lot of the papers said ah was counted out. Ain't true, ah tell you. You know what? Ah'd like to fight him tomorrow in a gym with 6-ounce gloves. Ah don't want no money. Ah just want to flatten him, like ah could."

Hymie Caplin, who owns 16 2-3 of Jenkins, shuddered at the thought and quickly changed the subject.

Jenkins can't see much chance that Henry Armstrong will open up those old wounds badly enough to win. In fact, Jenkins can't see Henry's staying in there long enough to pepper away at him and cut him.

We reminded Lew that Hennery is very hard to tag, thanks to a weaving and bobbing head-down style.

"They tole me as how Ambers couldn't be hit, neither," he observed, "Ah hit him good, too."

This is going to be an amazing fight in more ways than one. Unless all signs fail, it will draw more money than the heavyweight championship fight between Joe Louis and Arturo Godoy, and more than the Max Baer-Tony Galento brawl. Yet no title is at stake. It is just one of those killer-diller battles with no altruistic purpose—and brings together two punchers the likes of which haven't been seen in years.

Eight years ago Armstrong was in a Los Angeles breadline and the 23-year-old Jenkins (who looks 35) was picking cotton. Next week the poetry-writing colored boy and the tough, git-tar-strumming Texan, will attract an estimated $175,000 gate by getting in their and letting go with their Sunday punches.

Limit Field Named for Hagerstown's Opening Feature Today

Never Home, Eltonhead in Sprint Test

82 Horses Fail In Effort to Run In 3d Race; Card Opens Md. Season

By Walter Haight

Maryland's ten-week season of half-mile racing, destined to carry the vest-pocket version of the sport of kings to virtually every section of the State, gets under way today. At Hagerstown, located in that fertile, rolling country west of Middletown Valley, the bangtails are scheduled to make their first stand of a two-week session. At 2:30 p. m., a rollocking group of 2-year-olds are scheduled to break from the electric starting gate and battle it out for oats for themselves and gold for their owners.

Racing Secretary Edward Brennan completed a good card for the opening of the sporty track. The program is topped by the Harry E. Bester Memorial Purse, named for the man who did so much for the sport in that section and father of Harold Bester, present general manager of the plant.

Sixteen Excluded

So eager were the horsemen to enter their charges in this 5-furlong test that Brennan found it necessary to eliminate 16 by drawing. Of the 14 named in the overnight entries, 8 will face the starter. Fields at Hagerstown are limited to 8 to make for safety and truer racing.

The field is fairly boiling over with speed. Horses that raced at Charles Town, Delaware Park and on the Maryland big time last spring are named. Among the popular sprinters on the list are Eltonhead, Never Home, Walter Light, Highland Song, Lula Khayyam and Little Harpist.

While 16 horses went out of the fasture line-up, this was nothing to the eliminations in other events. In the second race, 96 horses were named in the entries for this single event. Eighty-two were forced out of action. The third race had 33 excluded, while it was necessary to drop 35 out of the eligibles for the seventh event.

Race Special Ready

For the first time, the B. & O. Railroad is conducting a race special to Hagerstown. The train leaves Union Station at 12:05, making stops at 15-minute intervals at Silver Spring and Rockville. Agent Cox tells me that the trip is only ten minutes longer than to Charles Town.

Hagerstown will offer the "tote" form of betting. The equipment was checked yesterday. In addition, the track will use the Puett starting gate, first introduced in this section at Pimlico's meeting.

Red Cross Aid Show Planned By Leny Manor

Event Is Scheduled Near Warrenton July 27; Many Classes Set

Special Dispatch to The Post

Warrenton, Va., July 8.—The American Red Cross will receive the net proceeds of the Leny Manor Horse and Pony Show, which will be held Saturday, July 27, at the estate of John R. Buchanan, near here.

Horsemen who were busy until Christmastime last year with drying out sodden riding boots and equipment from the terrific deluge that befell the show last July will be relieved to learn that everything will be postponed if the rains appear this year.

All officers, judges, and riders in the show must be 21-year-old or under. Classes include saddle ponies, jumping ponies, green hunters, handy hunters, touch-and-out, children's hunters, pony hunter hacks, open hunters, open jumper stake, knockdown-and-out, bareback jumping, grooms' class, and pet class.

Another feature of the show is the "go-to-bed race," the rules of which will be announced the day of the show.

The championship of the show will be awarded on the basis of points won throughout the day.

Henry Wallach heads the committee, which also has on it Elizabeth Wilbur, Chris Rodgers, and Jane Calvert.

Southland Beau Wins at Arlington

Chicago, July 8 (AP).—Southland Beau, owned by F. P. Letellier, New Orleans, drove hard in the stretch to beat Jake Lowenstein's Gold Flag, the favorite, by three-quarters of a length in the Orrington Purse at Arlington Park today.

Southland Beau returned $12.40, $4.40 and $3, while Gold Flag paid $3 and $2.40. Show price on Arched was $3.60. Ridden by Billy Thompson, Southland Beau ran the 7 furlongs in 1:25 3-5.

Milt Rieser's Arched, which set the pace, hung on for third, as a ladies' day crowd of 12,000 watched.

Selections at Hagerstown.

Dear Al: New deal today, fellows. Hagerstown, with all modern improvements, starts ten days of business. I was out yesterday and looked the plant over. The track publicity department did not tell a lie. The track has been resurfaced. That abrupt turn out of the stretch has been built up, and the curve of the fence has been set back some 6 feet. Stevens, Inc., has installed its equipment there for the first time, and Brother Joe Stevens gave the newspaper boys a sneak preview. We tackled noodles and roast beef and that entry has been voted the best bet. The lawn has been newly surfaced. The clubhouse, installed last year, is spic and span. Jess Bennett, custodian of the jockeys' room, who has been ill, surprised by showing plenty of the old life. Racing Secretary Eddie Brennan, fresh from Delaware Park, was smiling, a sure sign that the half-mile season was about to get under way. Harold Bester, the general manager, was scowling, a sure sign that the Hagerstown meeting will be a success. Perry, the slow-moving jack-of-all-trades in the secretary's office, had his hand out, a sure sign that he hasn't been working regularly. Steward George Brown was busy going over applications for jockey licenses and stalls, a sure sign that the officiating is going to be tight. Jockey Sammy Palumbo said that he did not expect to ride as much as he did at Charles Town. He wasn't feeling any too good during the meeting over there but managed to ride 43 winners. Plans to take a few mounts at first. That long layoff Palumbo had last year hasn't dimmed his ability. He has two children and a little bird told me——. By the way, if you are planning to auto up to Hagerstown today or tomorrow, leave about 20 minutes earlier than you generally plan. There's a detour between Middletown and Boonesboro. Understand the road will be O. K. Thursday. Detour is over good road, but you lose some ground. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—Mayfern did about everything asked at the other track and appears nicely placed in this field of juveniles. I see no reason for mistakes. Valley Creek flashed a lot of speed in a recent effort and could be better than rated. Black Mill may get into the money circle.

Second race—Goodwine has a class edge on this kind and seems headed for a set of brackets in this company. Sun Sweep won a shorter sprint at the other town. Speed Ship comes from the big time and has early foot.

Third race—Romney Royal should like this oval better than Charles Town. The sharp turns should suit and I'm going to string along. Briar Bird comes from the big time and could do a lot of running. Spout Run showed an improved effort last out and is dangerous.

Fourth race—Eltonhead has speed to go to the front in this and may stay there. I'm going to take my chances. Never Home had plenty of foot at the other town and belongs with this kind. Pirate Ship is better than recent efforts reveal.

Fifth race—Flag Etta downed better than these at the other course. Promises to get good handling today. The Wageley Entry of Bellthorn and Real Money has both a fast track and an off track representative. They are dangerous contenders. Sky Hostess has met and defeated good ones.

Sixth race—Sunny Rose turned in encouraging efforts with good company in recent races. Meets cheap ones here and should click. Sea Finn was lightly used at the other oval and is ready for the best. Gimpy has raced with better horses.

Seventh race—Mastake could be the right one in the day's finale. Made a nice move before weakening last out. Arrow Girl has early speed and will have to be caught. Lacey Miss is inconsistent and dangerous.

Best bet—Sunny Rose.

Stoney Brush Wins Feature At Empire City

Breaks on Top and Leads All Way in Glen Island 'Cap

By the Associated Press

Empire City Race Track, Yonkers, N. Y., July 7.—Stoney Brush, a candidate for the title of "most improved horse in training," continued his unbroken string of victories in the featured Glen Island (class "D") Handicap of a mile and a furlong here today.

Giving his Canadian owner, H. R. Bain, a double, the 4-year-old son of Gallant Fox—Stony Stare led all the way despite racing wide at the first and last turns and registered his seventh score in as many 1940 starts by three-quarters of a length. R. C. Thatcher's plodding Grandever was second by a half-length over Sidney Gooch's Short Distance. Eddie Arcaro earned a consecutive double astride the victor.

Stoney Brush, an even-money choice, finished in 1:53. Last year this fellow won only one of 16 races. He began his 1940 campaign running for $1,400 in claiming company but has moved up steadily. Owner Bain's other winner of the day was the juvenile Stimady in the opener, but that colt, now unbeaten in two starts, was claimed by M. E. Ryan for $3,250.

The flourishing business done here the first week continued today. The attendance was 11,255 and the play on the first five races was $417,091.

Stoney Brush broke on top and never was headed. The colt outran Short Distance, a speedy mare, and disposed of her as the field swung for home. Grandever closed with characteristic late speed but was held safe by the Soney one. Short Distance distanced the other three starters.

McNeill, Cooke Reach Fourth Round In Clay Court Tourney

Top Choices Both Score 2 Victories

Reach Fourth Round; 7th-Ranked Bob Low Only Seeded Player Eliminated at N. Y.

By the Associated Press

New York, July 8.—Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, and Elwood Cooke of Portland, Oreg., seeded first and second in the New York State clay courts tennis championships, needed only 45 minutes each to enter the fourth round today. Starting the tournament two days late, they each received first-round defaults, then swept through second and third round opposition in straight sets.

McNeill, national clay courts champion, routed Bill Thomas, of St. Albans, N. Y., 6—2, 6—0, and reached the fourth round with a 6—2, 6—1 triumph over Bernard Jacoby, of Louisiana State University. Cooke eliminated Lieut. Caldwell Russell, of West Point, N. Y., 6—3, 6—4, and Wilson Rood, of Brooklyn, 6—0, 6—3.

One seeded player, Bobby Low, of New York and Stanford University, ranked seventh, was eliminated, but two others, Joe Fishback, of New York, No. 6, and Bill Umstaedter, of Millburn, N. J., and Louisiana State, No. 8, reached the third round.

Low, after receiving a default from Thomas Pardoe, of Provo, Utah, lost his second-round match to the aggressive Vincent Paul, of New York, 6—4, 5—7, 6—1. Fishbach turned back Dick Seeler, Canton, N. Y., 6—3, 6—4, and Walter Puckhaber, New York, 6—3, 6—2. Umstaedter, national junior indoor champion, bowled over two local rivals, Joseph Bier, 6—2, 6—2, and George Preston, 6—2, 6—4.

Others who reached the round of 16 today were George Pero and Bill Hardie, of Miami, Fla.; Myron McNamara, of Los Angeles, and Leonard Hartman, of New York. Fifth-seeded Bill Gillespie, of Atlanta, Miami University teammate of Pero and Hardie, and George Littleton-Rogers, of Ireland, got there yesterday.

Pero today whipped Charles Rider, of Malverne, N. Y., and the University of North Carolina, 2—6, 6—4, 6—4; Hardie eliminated George Kraft, New York, 6—4, 6—4; McNamara defeated John Curtiss, Ithaca, N. Y., 6—3, 1—6, 6—2, and Hartman beat William Pardoe, Provo, Utah, 6—1, 6—0.

Helen Jacobs, Hope Knowles Pace Advance

13 Players Reach Fourth Round of Middle States Net

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 8.—Helen Jacobs, Helen Bernhard and Hope Knowles shared the limelight today as 13 players from an original field of 60 entered the fourth round of the Middle States Women's Tennis Tourney at the Philadelphia Cricket Club.

Miss Jacobs, former National and Wimbledon champion from Berkeley, Calif., drew a first-round bye then swept aside Betty Shellenberger, Philadelphia, 6—1, 6—1.

Miss Bernhard, 19-year-old defending champion from New York, beat Barbara Rossmassler, Philadelphia, 6—0, 6—0, and Dorothy Wightman, of Boston, 6—1, 6—1.

Miss Knowles, regarded as Philadelphia's most dangerous contender for the title, swept aside two Philadelphians, Mrs. E. Foster Hammonds, 6—1, 6—0, and Mrs. Elwood I. Beatty, jr., 6—1, 6—2.

The ten others to advance are Helen Pedersen, Stamford, Conn.; Doris Hart and Nellie Sheer, both of Miami, Fla.; Frances Bancroft, Wilmington, Del.; Margurite Madden and Emily Lincoln, both Boston; Eunice Dean, San Antonio, Tex., and Cecile Bowes, Barbara Strobhar and Madge Harshaw, all of Philadelphia.

The remaining three places in the round of 16 will be filled tomorrow.

Mrs. Randels Leads Manor Trophy Play

Mrs. J. E. Randels was the first round leader in the Schlosser trophy tournament yesterday at Manor with 106-31, 75, but Middle Atlantic and Maryland State champion, Mrs. Walter R. Stokes featured the day's play.

Mrs. Stokes played the course in 79 strokes, with an out nine of 40 and back nine of 39, and minus a two handicap took second place with a net 77.

Mrs. W. N. Baker was third with 97-18, 79, while Mrs. H. J. Beech, 94-14, 80, and Mrs. J. V. Brownell, 94-13, 81, were others in the five low scorers of the first round. The field of 26 will play the second and final 18 holes today.

D. C., Baltimore Each Win Four National Public Links Berths

Baltimore's other three representatives in the championship July 22-27 will be Lawrence Wisner, former assistant pro at the Suburban Club, who regained his amateur standing in 1938, and two Bethlehem Steel employes, Eddie Meyer, medalist last year at Mount Pleasant, and Benson Ensor. Meyer had 151 and the others 150.

Medalist 3 Over Par

Zent, Oliveri and Janowski will comprise the Washington three-man Harding Cup team in the national championship and will have their expenses paid by Public Links Concessionnaire S. G. Leoffler. A match has been arranged for Sunday at Mount Pleasant with four local qualifiers meeting the Baltimoreans with a collection to be taken up to help defray the expenses of the other qualifiers.

Local U. S. G. A. Public Links Representative Tommy Doerer, jr., stretched the East Potomac course to its full 6,750 yards and the best muny players in the District and Maryland had their troubles. The low scorer's total was three over par, while he and Oliveri posted the only 18-hole par rounds of the day. In addition, a half-dozen of the favored players were among the no-cards, including Maryland Junior Champion Freddie Bolton, Gil Willett, Harold Bowers, Charles Alexander, Pat Axtell, Sam Parks and Harry Saunders. W. W. Seay posted a pair of 80's, Julian Williams 160 and Cal Loving 167.

Zent Surprises

Oliveri and Ensor are the "veterans" of the eight qualifiers, with this tournament making their fourth. Armacost has qualified three times in three attempts, Morris three times, Meyer twice, and it will be the first one for Wisner, Zent and Jankowski.

Zent was the surprise package of the locals. He moved here three years ago from Fort Worth, Tex., where he was the Ridgelee Club champion and a prominent public links player. He has restricted his local golf to Rock Creek and East Potomac, and has played in little competition.

Armacost was among the half dozen low scorers as he played the morning round in 75, out in 38 and back in 37. His out nine in the afternoon matched his morning out nine on eight of the nine holes, and then he came back in eight pars and a birdie for the 35 and 72. He first knew on the thirty-sixth tee that he needed a par for a medal, and he easily made his par 4 for the score.

Morris won the playoff with two bogeys and a birdie. Bobby Burton missed out on the first hole and with a double bogey 6, while Smith missed short putts for pars on both the first and second holes. He took 6 on the par 5 third and Morris was in safely with a par.

Jankowski holed a full eigth-iron shot for an eagle deuce on the ninth hole of the morning round, and his worst mistake was four putts on the third green.

Zent played consistent golf with 38—35, 73, and 38—37, 75, with good but not spectacular putting.

Oliveri came to the last hole and needed a birdie three to tie Zent, who was the leader. He missed the green, however, and took a bogey five for the 150. He was par for the day excepting his wild third nine.

D. G. S. Slugs To Win, 11-2, Over I. D. R. A.

13-hit barrage highlighted by two home runs gave D. G. S. an 11-2 victory over I. D. R. A. and the championship of the first half of play in the Departmental league yesterday on the West Ellipse.

Faircloth, who went the route for D. G. S., allowed the Interior nine but four hits, striking out three men and walking eight in the process. Club and Stant were clubbed by the D. G. S. batters, Stadler and Arnison getting circuit blows. D. G. S. opened up with four runs in the first, and the game was on ice from that point on out.

Illinois Rules Thomas 'Fix' Charges False

Decision Closes Out Long Investigation Of Fighter's Claims

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 8.—The Illinois State Athletic Commission closed its books today on the Harry Thomas "fixed fight" case with a decision that charges by the former heavyweight boxer "were not sustained."

The decision ended a long investigation by the commission, begun after Thomas charged, in a story published in the Chicago Tribune October 30, 1939, that he had met Max Schmeling and Tony Galento in matches, the outcome of which had been prearranged. The Schmeling-Thomas bout, held December 13, 1937, at New York, was won by Schmeling on an eighth-round technical knockout. Galento won his bout, held November 14, 1938, at Philadelphia, on a technical knockout in the third round.

Thomas Silent

The commission said it had invited Thomas to appear before it personally or give a written statement denying or substantiating the charges, but he refused. The commission's decision added that "Thomas has remained absolutely silent."

The commission also pointed out that Thomas, who formerly lived in Eagle Bend, Minn., and is now employed in New York, declined to testify before the New York State Boxing Commission because any statements he made might be incriminating.

Arch Ward, sports editor of the Tribune and author of the article in which Thomas made his charges, was one of the few persons who accepted invitations to appear personally before the commission. He testified Thomas told him the Schmeling-Thomas fight was prearranged in a Chicago hotel and that he had agreed to lose to Schmeling because of the opportunity of gaining more money than he had ever hoped to earn in the ring.

Donovan Quoted

The commission asserted that Arthur Donovan, referee of the Schmeling-Thomas fight, said he had halted the bout because Thomas was in no physical condition to continue. Mike Jacobs, of New York, who promoted the match, wrote the commission that "there were no irregularities" and that Thomas had put up a game fight.

Thomas O'Keefe, who refereed the Galento-Thomas match, branded the charges 'ridiculous" while Herman Taylor, Philadelphia, promoter of the Galento-Thomas match, informed the commission that while the fight was unsatisfactory because Thomas was not a fit opponent, he nevertheless believed Thomas made an honest effort.

Nate Lewis, Thomas' manager, denied the charges in several appearances before the commission, while Galento and the late Joe Jacobs, who managed both Galento and Schmeling, both communicated denials of the charges.

1940 Promises To Be Financial Success for A's

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 8.—If nothing else 1940 promises to be a financial success for the Athletics.

A crowd of 37,129—the largest of the season—turned out at Shibe Park yesterday to watch the A's make it three out of four in a four-game series with the New York Yankees by splitting a double-header.

The turnout boosted the A's home attendance for the season to an unofficial total of 355,519 or an average of approximately 9,600 per game. With 40 games remaining at Shibe Park the A's may draw close to 700,000 for the year, one of the best Connie Mack has enjoyed at home since his 1929-1930-1931 championship era.

On the road the A's have played before 242,284 making an aggregate of 597,803.

Philadelphia's other major league team—the Phillies—hindered by inclement weather, in 35 home games have drawn an unofficial 153,615. On the road they have played to 230,910 for an aggregate of 384,525.

U. S. Income Turns Higher In April, May

The decline in the national income of the United States from the 1939 peak of $7,582,000,000 last October to $5,449,000,000 in March was interrupted by an upturn in April to $5,464,000,000. This upturn was followed by a further expansion in May, with the national income rising to $5,726,000,000, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute.

The national income in May was the largest since January and was 14.2 per cent greater than in the corresponding month last year, when it amounted to $5,015,000,000.

"As the result of the gain over a year ago in May, together with gains made in the previous months of this year, the national income for the first five months totaled $28,308,000,000 as against $25,427,000,000 in the corresponding period last year, an increase of 11.3 per cent," the institute reported. The national income in the first five months of 1940 was higher than in any corresponding period since 1930, with the exception of 1937, when the income amounted to $29,536,000,000, the analysis showed.

"Preliminary information indicates that the national income showed a further expansion in June despite a weakening of prices. . . . During the next four months, the national income should continue to show an upward tendency. There is some question, however, whether this prospective rise will be as great as in the corresponding period last year. If the war should come to an end in the near future, there might be some tendency for industrial activity to slacken. With the end of the war, the necessity for carrying heavy inventories would no longer exist and it is possible that some reduction would be made at the expense of the rate of output. The fact should not be overlooked, however, that such a development might be considerably modified by the stimulating effect of the Government's armament program," the institute concluded.

Steel Mill Rate Expected to Rise To 86.4 Per Cent

New York, July 8.—Steel mill operating schedules will rebound to 86.4 per cent of capacity this week after Fourth of July holiday had reduced output to 74.2 per cent in the preceding week, the American Iron and Steel Institute estimated today.

The current week was a shade under the 86.5 rate prevailing before the holiday week.

A month ago operations were 84.6 per cent of capacity and a year ago 49.7.

June Steel Output Doubled

New York, July 8 (AP).—June production of open-hearth and Bessemer steel ingots more than doubled June last year and outstripped May by 14 per cent, the American Iron & Steel Institute said today.

June output of 5,532,910 net tons was 57 per cent greater than 3,523,880 in June last year and compared with 4,841,403 in May.

Production in the first half of the year of 28,678,124 represented a gain of 37 per cent over 20,958,723 a year ago.

Pullman Co. Deficit Increases in Month

Chicago, July 8 (AP).—The Pullman Company, sleeping car subsidiary of Pullman Incorporated, reported today a net deficit for May of $201,072.80 as compared with $84,012.92 for the same month a year ago.

Net income for the five-month period ended May 31 was $991,132.31 as compared with $1,138,406.17 for the same period a year ago.

Wheat at Chicago ended ⅝ to 1 cent a bushel off; corn was ½ to ¾ of a cent higher.

Other futures markets at New York closing lower by moderate accounts included wool tops, cocoa, silk, hides, and the two sugar contracts.

Santos coffee was a shade improved and rubber for future delivery added .05 to .37 of a cent a pound.

July Cotton Rallies

New York, July 8 (AP).—The cotton futures market today completely reversed the price patterns that held last week as the old July delivery closed 7 higher and new crop months lost to 6 points.

Last week July was under consistent pressure while traders evened up accounts as the life of the contract drew to a close. Only reason traders could offer for the trend reversal was the suggestion July had been oversold.

Expansion Noted In New Loans of New York Banks

New York, July 7 (AP).—A survey of 60 per cent of New York State's commercial banks showed a "definite expansion of bank credit in the field of new loans" in 1939, the American Bankers Association said today.

New loans made between July 31 and December 31 totaled 189,995, or 15 per cent more than in the preceding six months. Dollar volume of new loans increased 21 per cent to $1,025,936,872.

The 432 out of 719 commercial banks which participated in the survey made more than 4,000,000 loans totaling over $13,000,000,000 to business firms and individuals in 1939.

Average number of new loans per bank was 6,173 and the average amount $4,036.

Business Failures Cut in Holiday Week

New York, July 8 (AP).—Business failures in the United States declined to 259 in the week ended July 4 from 286 in the preceding week chiefly because of the Independence Day holiday, Dun & Bradstreet reported today. A year ago, also a holiday week, the total was 208.

$500,000,000 Issue Mapped By Treasury

Reserve Committee To Settle Details At Parley Today

Secretary Morgenthau said yesterday the Treasury was considering the sale of $500,000,000 to $700,000,000 worth of bonds this week to replenish Treasury cash.

He said final details of the issue, the first to raise "new money" since December 8, 1939—would be settled today when he would consult the Federal Reserve Board's open market committee.

The secretary said he hoped to sell the new bonds at less than the 2 per cent interest rate of the December issue.

He added that the borrowing was necessitated by dwindling of the Treasury's cash working balance below $1,000,000,000, the minimum amount he desires to keep on hand.

The new bonds, Morgenthau pointed out, would be of the regular Treasury variety, and not the new defense bonds, authorized by Congress in the amount of $4,000,000,000 to finance the new defense program.

Housing Survey Started

A special survey of adequate housing for workers in war industries is being made by the Twentieth Century Fund, a nonpartisan foundation for research in economics. The research work is directed by Miles L. Colean and offices of the housing survey research staff are in Washington.

Evans Clark, executive director of the fund said yesterday that "the country must know what will be the housing needs of the many thousands of workers who will be drawn into our industrial defense program. We want to review what was done on this problem in the first World War—to see what measures were successful and what mistakes were made. We want to estimate what the probable current needs will be and how best to meet them."

The housing survey of the Twentieth Century Fund is being supervised by a committee of which Dr. Henry E. Hoagland, professor of business finance at Ohio State University, is chairman. Other members of the committee are Mrs. Lillian M. Gilbreth, Dr. Frank P. Graham, Mr. Henry I. Harriman, Mr. Arthur C. Holden, Mr. John A. Lapp and Dr. William I. Myers.

Pepco Hearing Set

The Securities and Exchange Commission announced yesterday a hearing has been set for July 22, at 10:00 a. m., on the application of Potomac Electric Power Co. regarding the issuance and private sale of $10,000,000 of 3¼ per cent first mortgage bonds, series due 1974. Persons desiring to be heard in this matter are asked to notify the commission before July 17.

Southeast Starts Curing Leaf Raised Under Federal Control

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, July 8.—Smoke curled from curing barns in the Southeast's tobaccoland today, starting another luxury crop of cigarette leaf toward markets.

Upwards of 300,000 Southern farmers look to flue-cured tobacco, the type used principally for cigarettes and snuff, for a major part of their annual income.

They set out plants this year under controls intended to restrict production to less than 700,000,000 pounds, for a nation that consumes between 350,000,000 and 400,000,000 pounds annually. The remainder was aimed at the export trade, dwindled now to a mere trickle because of the loss of European and British markets.

Unseasonal cold weather delayed the crop in some sections as much as two weeks, but the broad-leafed plants are ripening in Florida, Georgia, eastern Alabama and South Carolina, and growers are working on 24-hour shifts in the most nerve-wracking part of their job, treating the leaf by heat.

One acre of bright leaf tobacco may yield from 700 to 900 pounds of saleable leaf, bringing possibly an average of 15 cents a pound. Federal farm officials may undertake to guarantee that average this year, contingent upon approval by the growers in a referendum on July 20 of marketing quotas for the next three seasons.

Last year growers rejected the quota system for their 1939 crop and saw a bumper crop knock the bottom out of prices. They promptly voted controls for 1940.

First auctions begin in the Georgia-Florida belt on August 8. (Markets open later in the Carolinas and Virginia as the season advances. Alabama growers customarily take their crop to Georgia auctions.)

J. B. Hutson, assistant Agricultural Adjustment administrator, said arrangements would be made, subject to approval of the three-year control program, for the Commodity Credit Corporation to buy most of the surplus of 100,000,000 to 150,000,000 pounds expected this season.

There is already a heavy carry-over of bright leaf from previous seasons in warehouses.

Inland Cities and Districts Vie for Arms Program Work

By Merryle S. Rukeyser

A VIGOROUS competition among cities and districts is taking place in order to attract emergency industrial war plants to their locality.

With the fear of possible ultimate foreign invasion, cities in the Middle West are having their innings in competition with the hitherto favored Atlantic seaboard.

In the effort to get some offsetting local benefits out of the enlarged defense program, pilgrimages from cities and regions are moving on the Nation's Capital, knocking at the doors of Administration officials and businessmen serving in an advisory capacity.

To all of its other advantages the great inland empire, in presenting its case, adds the new factor of alleged better freedom from potential enemy air attack "when, as and if."

BESIDES, men from that region stress the need of strengthening the national economy through rescuing the great agricultural areas from chronic depression. They argue not without force in favor of balancing the inland empire with industry as well as agriculture, so that vast sections can be freed from the curse of specializing in cheap bulk raw materials.

As unbiased analysts look over the prospectuses and find much of merit in them they raise a few practical questions. In some regions the drawback is lack of pure water, which is highly essential for industrial purposes. Industrialists take the view that it is too easy to filter unclean river water for industrial purposes. Thus, the men in command are eager to be satisfied on water facilities. Some parts of the region are better supplied with wells and other sources of pure water than others.

BOOSTERS for the inland empire have been a little disturbed by the rumor that the Administration would use the national defense emergency as an opportunity to vaiicate its huge commitments in the Tennessee Valley by locating war plants there. Impartial observers recognize that the surrounding mountains protect the region and give it certain advantages. On the other hand, industrialists who have intimately studied the economic basis for the TVA contend that no elaborate multiplication of industries could take place there without supplementing water power with steam plants which would be effective at times when the water is low and the generated power scarce.

One factor which encourages the boosters is the fact that William S. Knudsen, generalissimo of national defense, is known to favor building new plants for war materials instead of converting normal peacetime plants.

ANOTHER FACTOR which encourages the Central West is the belief that new world-wide factors will make American business increasingly dependent on the domestic market. If that is the case, then the Central West will be located near the principal market, whereas the claim of the seaboard cities in part rested on their accessibility to foreign markets.

Stocks Move in Rut as Trade Continues At Slowest Pace in More Than 20 Years

New York, July 8.—Trading was subject to further drastic curtailment today and volume of business on the Stock Exchange sank to the lowest level in more than 20 years, or since June 29, 1920. With everyone in the financial district disposed to await disclosures of the next war moves, and the identity of the Democrat Presidential candidate, equities barely moved within an extremely narrow range.

The 100 stocks ended 0.04 point down with sales of only 232,890 shares and only 522 of the some 1,260 listed issues traded during the day.

Foreign exchange movements were small and without significance. Chief interest centered in the new arrivals in gold, an exceptionally heavy shipment having been received here from England over the week-end.

Trade News Cheerful

Business news, on the whole, continued favorable. Further improvement in most lines of business and industry through the summer was forecast over the week-end by the Department of Commerce. Government officials were said to believe that the eventual effect of the huge national defense expenditures will be to bring about unprecedented activity in some fields.

The snap-back in steel production to within a tiny fraction of the rate which obtained before the Independence Day holiday, was perhaps a bit better than some observers had expected. While additional rises in the output rate are expected through July, August and September, shut downs in some Pittsburgh plants for repairs this week, had some effect on the post-holiday recovery.

In some quarters, however, the most encouraging news was that relating to General Motors consumer sales for June. Deliveries to United States consumers for the month were the third largest on record and made a contra-seasonal advance from the May totals.

Industrial Index High

The Federal Reserve estimated the production index for June at 115 per cent of the 1923-1925 average against 105 for May and 98 a year ago. The betterment is, of course, chiefly the result of higher steel and automotive schedules.

Some of the preferred stocks, including senior utilities, moved higher on a few sales, but common stocks on the whole were little changed. Among the few issues to move out of the fractional rut were Associated Dry Goods second preferred, up 11; B. M. T. preferred at a new high of 110, up 2¾; A. M. Byers preferred at 59, up 3, and Jones & Laughlin preferred, 68, up 4, and Lorillard preferred, up 6.

Fair-sized gains appeared in Square D Co., New York, New York Omnibus and Eastman Kodak. Losses of around a point occurred in Mesta Machine, Munsingwear, Pacific Mills and Cluett Peabody.

Packard Again Leads

In active categories, low-priced issues were once more prominent. Packard led the list on 12,800 shares at 3⅛, unchanged. United Aircraft as one of the few aero shares to advance. It finished at 33, up ½. Steel common was down ⅛ or slightly more than the average for the steel section. Metals were a trifle softer than other sections but the two leaders, Anaconda and Kennecott lost only ⅛ each. Small gains ruled in manufacturing specialties, foods and second-grade rails while motors and oils held about unchanged. Utilities were duller than usual.

Small gains were the rule in a dull listed bond market session today. Most traders and investors appeared determined to wait out the European war developments and the uncertainties of the third-term issues, before taking a stand in bonds. Speculative issues showed a number of small gains, but the dealings were too modest to indicate any kind of a trend. Treasury bonds and other higher-rated investments were dull. The foreign list was generally good. Total trading amounted only to $4,350,000.

Rail Bonds Firm

Some of the speculative railroad issues continued to attract interest, owing to the high yields available on many of the interest-paying securities. The buying was spasmodic, however, and only in a few instances were sizable gains apparent. Industrial and communications bonds were firm, while a little interest appeared in utility obligations of the speculative variety. Other groups were dull.

United States Treasury bonds were not affected by the late Washington announcement that $500,000,000 to $700,000,000 of new bond financing soon may be undertaken. Small fractional losses were recorded before that statement was made, and it is hardly to be supposed that the trend would have changed if the news had been made available during trading hours. Best rated corporate issues held close to former levels.

Canadian bonds were in fair demand in the foreign section, while Australians were dull. The German and Italian groups hardly varied. Latin-Americans showed a few good spots.

Gen. Motors' Sales in June Near Record

173,212 Units Delivered Against 124,618 in Same 1939 Month

By the Associated Press

New York, July 8.—General Motors Corporation announced today that its sales to consumers in June were the third best for that month in its history.

The company sold 173,212 cars and trucks in the United States, compared with 165,820 in May and 124,618 in June of last year.

Only in June of 1936 when the total was 189,756 and in June of 1928 with a figure of 174,085 did General Motors sell more cars to the consumers than in June of this year.

Lower Than in May

Sales to dealers in the United States in last month were 151,661, a substantial decline from the total of 171,024 in May, as dealers reduced their stocks, but were well above 124,048 in June of last year.

Sales to dealers in the United States in the first six months of 1940 were at a record for the history of the company at 1,013,034, compared with 738,788 in the first half of last year. The previous record for first half sales to dealers was in 1936, at 978,274.

Sales of cars and trucks to consumers in the United States in first six months totaled 941,821, compared with 700,461 in like 1939 period.

Total sales to dealers in United States and Canada plus overseas shipments were 167,310 units in June, against 185,548 in May and 139,694 in June, 1939.

Assembly to Suspend

Detroit, July 8 (AP).—Practically all of the motorcar industry's assembly plants will be closed by the end of the present month for the change-over to new models, says Ward's Automotive Reports in its current issue.

Last week, the trade publication says, five plants—Cadillac, Hudson, Nash, Packard and Studebaker—closed down for change-over operations. Noting that the completion of the 1940 model output throughout the industry this month will bring the earliest shutdown program since the fall introductions of new models were inaugurated, Ward's adds:

"First resumptions of operations on 1941 models will be seen before the end of the month. Several plants will be in production on 1941's by mid-August, and the indication now is that factories will be in 1941 model runs by mid-September, and quite likely earlier.

Tin Export Quota Increased to Help U.S. Arms Program

By the Associated Press

London, July 8.—The international tin committee today boosted export quotas for producing nations to 130 per cent of standard tonnages for one year, starting July 1.

The committee's action revised its May 27 announcement fixing quotas at 100 per cent for the third quarter of 1940. Quota in the quarter ended June 30 was 80 per cent, and in the first quarter 120 per cent.

The 130 per cent quota was fixed, said the committee, following receipt of the results of the negotiations between the committee's representatives, John Van Den Broek, of Batavia, and Victor A. Lowinger, of London, with United States authorities.

Lowinger and Van Den Broek have been in Washington making arrangements for United States purchase of 75,000 tons of tin for part of the Nation's store of strategic war materials.

(The Metals Reserve Co., financed with Reconstruction Finance Corporation, was recently formed to purchase, among other metals, the tin.

(Commodity circles in New York viewed the quota boost as designed to supply to the market enough extra tin to provide for Government demands in addition industrial needs.

(Similar action was taken last Friday by the international rubber regulation committee, which raised quotas to allow for United States purchase of 150,000 tons of raw rubber.)

Amsterdam Exchange To Reopen(Berlin Says

Berlin, July 8 (AP).—The Amsterdam Stock Exchange will reopen July 15, it was announced here today. Only official quotations will be for Dutch government bonds.

(Trade in securities was suspended immediately after German invasion of the Low Countries.)

Swiss Act to Freeze Foreigners' Deposits

Bern, Switzerland, July 8 (AP).—Switzerland, sometimes called the banker nation of Europe, took drastic steps today to prevent any more of her capital being frozen abroad.

In an action somewhat similar to that previously taken by the United States, the Swiss government issued a decree restricting free disposal of foreign capital deposited in Switzerland either by individuals or firms from Belgium, The Netherlands, France, Denmark, Norway and Luxembourg, all of which have been conquered by Germany.

Gross Farm Income Rises $407,000,000

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics reported yesterday that gross farm income in the United States last year was $9,769,000,000, as against $9,362,000,000 in 1938.

The total for 1937 was $10,589,000,000, and for 1936, $9,91,000,000.

Cash income from marketings in 1939, the bureau said, amounted to $7,733,000,000, compared with $7,590,000,000 in 1938, an increase of about 2 per cent. The value of products retained for home consumption declined from $1,290,000,000 in 1938 to $1,229,000,000 in 1939 because of lower prices of many important products. Government payments under the agricultural conservation program were $807,000,000 last year as against $482,000,000 in 1938.

Slight Boost In Cultivation Of Cotton Seen

1.6% Increase Noted By U. S. Agency Over Last Year's Figure

By the Associated Press

The Agriculture Department reported yesterday that 25,077,000 acres of cotton were under cultivation July 1, an increase of 1.6 per cent over the corresponding date last year.

Abandonment equal to the 1938-1939 average, the department said, would cut the area for harvest to 24,616,000 acres. This would be smaller than in any other year since 1899 except 1938 and 1939.

On the basis of last year's average yield of 237.9 pounds to the acre this would indicate total production of 12,251,352 bales. Figured at the 1935-1939 average of 221.4 pounds to the acre production would be 11,050,927 bales.

Total plantings, the department said, were well below the agricultural conservation program allotments, but some farmers whose plantings exceeded their allotments were expected to remove their excess acreage.

Hog Prices Reach $7 Top as Sharp Rise Continues

Chicago, July 8 (AP).—Hog prices continued their outstanding rise today, advancing as much as 50 cents and lifting the top to $7, the highest level since early in November.

Higher prices have benefited the corn-hog ratio, which has improved from 7.7 to more than 9.9. Livestock men here say the quality of hogs is rather poor and expect that the better ratio will induce farmers to finish hogs better, which will tend to make for smaller receipts in the near future.

Hog values are now $1.80 above the low point in the June price slump reached on June 20, and are only about 50 cents below last year's prices.

Prices in outside markets advanced from 20 to 50 cents, ranging from $6.75 to as high as $7.20 in Cincinnati. Top price at Indianapolis was $7.10; St. Louis, $7; Kansas City, $6.80; Omaha and St. Paul, $6.75.

Col. Williams Forms New Aircraft Firm

Toledo, Ohio, July 8 (AP).—Col. Roger Williams, transatlantic flier, announced today formation of the Williams Aircraft Corporation.

Williams, who made a one-stop flight to Rome in 1927, said his concern would build a plant here immediately and that it already has contracts to make parts for airplane companies working on Army and Navy orders.

Penney Sales Up 11%

New York, July 8 (AP).—J. C. Penney Co. today reported June sales jumped 11.2 per cent to $24,737,447 from $22,236,919 in June last year. Sales for the first half of the year totaled $125,305,051, or 8.3 per cent ahead of $115,655,858 in the comparable 1939 stretch.

Contract Bridge

"I was quite proud of the way I handled this situation," writes L. E. M., "and I thought the trump-reversal might interest you.

"The contract was four hearts; the opening lead was a small spade, taken by East, and a spade was returned.

"I trumped the second spade, entered dummy twice with the queen and jack of clubs and trumped twice more, then laid down the heart king and led the club king, which was ruffed, and a heart returned. This was taken with the ace in dummy; the diamond finesse was tried successfully, the ace cashed and the ace of clubs led. Both opponents had three hearts and four spades, and the contract was made 'on the nose.'"

On the lead of the ace of clubs, the defender, who had already trumped one round of clubs, was exhausted of hearts, and the other had one trump left. He could ruff the club and establish dummy's heart or let the club ace win the game-going trick.

Listen!
with Glynn

It'll practically be a convention within a convention when WJSV's stalwarts arrive in Chicago for that Democratic gathering a few days hence. Ann Gillis, arranger par excellence, goes forth tonight to set things up so that you can listen in on C. B. S. to what's going on there. She's to be followed shortly by that well-traveled, vocal young man, John Charles Daly, who arrived back from Hyde Park only yesterday. Harry Butcher is going to be there for the duration. WJSV's alumni association will be represented by Bob Trout, who's never been at a loss for words, and by your correspondent's immediate predecessor, Bill Slocum, who, as of Monday, started directing special events in New York for C. B. S.

Fuller explanation note: Lack of room in this space yesterday called for the pruning of an item and the net effect must been a little baffling to my exclusive set of readers. That was the bit about the versatility of Frank Readick, the C. B. S. actor who used to be responsible for that blood-curdling voice you heard in "The Shadow." Well, I went on to announce that when C. B. S. was casting the parts for as completely different a dramatic series from "The Shadow" as you could imagine—"Meet Mr. Meek," which starts over WJSV this Wednesday at 6:30 p. m.—surprise, surprise, Readick was the man chosen for the name role. "Meet Mr. Meek," as you probably have guessed, is a comedy-drama series about a nice Caspar Milquetoast type of guy, a pretty far cry from "The Shadow."

New Excuses Get Traffic Tickets Fixed

Man With Crutches, Tombstone Buyer Among 73 Let Off

A driver on a mail route, a man on crutches who didn't want to park at a distance on the way to church, and a man who parked double because he was depositing a large sum of money at a bank, were among 73 persons whose traffic tickets were adjusted last week, according to records made public yesterday.

Only one person pleaded diplomatic immunity, but a few new excuses lent color to the week's list. Fifty-six offenders received warnings, while 17 tickets were canceled.

The man on the mail route was Alex M. Nash, 1728 S street southeast, who was charged with parking on the car tracks. Nash explained that there was no space available nearer the mail box and he got off with a warning.

James Biggin, 3541 Fourteenth street northwesht, was the man on crutches. Robert W. Thomas, 344 Fourteenth street southeast, said he didn't want to take any chances with a large sum of money, so he parked double next to the bank. Both received warnings.

Others included Harland E. Beck, 814 Eighteenth street northwest, who explained he was purchasing a tombstone; Freda Maser, 3145 Adams Mill road, who said she was assisting an elderly person into a hospital, and Joseph C. Kennedy, 3407 Fourteenth street northwest, who pointed out that the entrance he parked in front of was no longer used as a garage and that the doors were nailed.

Diplomatic immunity was pleaded by Rene Girault, of the French Embassy, whose ticket for parking during restricted hours was canceled. Lawrence Everett, 1247 Irving street northwest, was let off with a warning for parking overtime at the request of Shuzo Jimbo, of the Japanese Embassy, who explained that Everett was on official business for the embassy.

Judge Bentley and Her Staff Receive Public In New $500,000 Juvenile Court Building

JUDGE IS "HOSTESS" AS NEW COURT BUILDING OPENS—Judge Fay Bentley (seated) played hostess yesterday to the public at the opening of the new Juvenile Court Building in Judiciary Square. Among those attending were (left to right) Herbert K. Willett, jr., director of the Community Chest; Dr. Paul J. Ewerhardt, director of the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, and Mrs. W. A. Roberts, former secretary of the Council of Social Agencies

Judge Fay L. Bentley and the staff of the Juvenile Court received the public in the court's new $500,000 building yesterday.

The building is the first "real home" established for the court since it was established in 1906. The court has been moving records and furnishings to the new quarters since last Wednesday, completing the change without interruption of work.

The new building is a unit of Judiciary Square, occupying the corner at Fourth and E streets northwest. The site corresponds to that of the United States Court of Appeals. Between and south of the two lies the historic District Court Building. North of the Court of Appeals the Police Court runs from E to F streets. Similarly, the Municipal Court is north of the Juvenile Court.

Scores of civic leaders, social workers and officials inspected the new Juvenile Court, guided by welcoming committee appointed by Judge Bentley.

Canada Orders Registration Of All Over 16

Ottawa, July 8 (AP).—Preparations for registration next month of every person in Canada—male and female—over 16 years were disclosed tonight as a part of stepping up the Canadian war effort.

The registration will be decided by Canada's new department of national war services, to which Prime Minister Mackenzie King appointed J. G. Gardiner as minister tonight.

That appointment came in the most extensive reshuffle of the cabinet since the war began.

Mackenzie King named Premier Angus L. Macdonald, of Nova Scotia, as defense minister for naval services, promoted two Liberal members of the House of Commons to ministerial rank, and made other changes in responsibilities.

The government will obtain complete information on the age, physical condition, domestic responsibilities, trade, occupation, profession, and willingness to serve in wartime capacities of every man and woman in Canada.

Daladier, Aides Still Alive, Dispatch Hints

Ex-Premier's Party Believed in British Port Or French Prison

By the Associated Press

Bern, Switzerland, July 8.—Belief was expressed by foreign sources in Switzerland today that former Premier Daladier and the boatload of French leaders who left France on the steamer Massilia for North Africa just before the armistice are in an English port or are imprisoned at Marseille.

The comment was occasioned by the first reference to Daladier and his friends since July 2 in the censored press of the Petain government.

If Daladier and his party are in Gibraltar or another English port, they possibly would be Britain's "ace in the hole" to bulwark the French committee led by Gen. Charles de Gaulle in London.

May Face War Blame

In the event they are in prison, they might be the scapegoats for the Petain government's crusade to find those responsible for the war.

Tday's reference to the Massilla's passengers was vague but indicated that they were alive.

The saga of the Massilia so far is a mystery which many Frenchmen in Switzerland linked to the equally mysterious automobile accident which the press in Petain's territory said befell former Premier Reynaud on June 28 while he, for reasons unknown, was speeding to the Riviera.

Reynaud's fate is still not known beyond the report that he had suffered serious injuries and then a correction saying that the injuries were not serious after all.

High Officials Were Aboard

The Massilia left a French port, bound for French North Africa, on June 16, a time when all aboard must have known the Reynaud government was doomed to fall and Petain was to be premier.

Here is a partial passenger list of the Massilia:

State Department Calls, Dies Keeps Testimony Secret

Austin, Tex., July 8 (INS).—Chairman Dies, of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, today pulled a veil of secrecy over testimony regarding subversive activities.

Although full transcripts will be taken of testimony given at hearings which got under way today in Austin, they will not be made public "because of the tense international situation," the Texas Congressman announced.

Dies acted to prevent publication of testimony after conferring by telephone with the State Department at Washington. The first witness before the committee as it opened hearings today was understood to have been Fritz Neuheisel, editor of a German language newspaper at San Antonio. It was assumed the testimony had to do with purported German consular attempts to influence policies on German-language newspapers.

A telephone call from the State Department at Washington abruptly halted committee hearings as the afternoon session was about to begin. Dies, summoned from the committee room, returned to recess the meeting until tomorrow. All testimony taken today was sent airmail to the State Department.

Silver Spring Groups Oppose Beer License

Montgomery Board Reserves Decision On Scarla Application

Strong opposition to the granting of a class "D" on-sale beer license to Angela Scarla, of Chevy Chase, Md., at 8617 Colesville road, Silver Spring, was voiced yesterday by a large group of residents at a hearing before the Montgomery County Liquor Control Board in the Liquor Dispensary Building, East-West highway.

Representatives of the Woodside Methodist Church, the Woodside Park Civic Association, the Silver Spring Citizens Association, the Roeder subdivision and property owners within the area concerned maintained the granting of such a license would depreciate the value of their property and hurt the mental health of young people in the community. They further argued that Silver Spring now has 13 dispensaries for the sale of beer and no more are needed.

Joseph Cissel represented Woodside Park and Colesville road residents. He urged the board to hold hearings in cases where there is opposition to give working residents a chance to express their opinions. The Woodside Park Civic Association last week unanimously opposed the granting of the license.

Among those who spoke in opposition were John J. Dolan, Charles Sanger, Orville Megby, Mrs. Seldon Cole, Mrs. Victor Lumsden, Mrs. Pearl Bellman and Mrs. John Dolan.

C. E. Nichols, jr., represented Scarla. The board reserved decision.

A license Class D was granted to Charles Cunningham for the Silver Inn, Potomac, Md., formerly owned by Clifford Peters, and an off-sale Class A license to the Woodmoor Market, 10129 Colesville road, Four Corners, operated by Thomas A. Titus, Louis Snider and Mathew Tepper.

The application of Clarence Gilbert, Bethesda, for a Class D license was denied. The board announced that it was notified yesterday by the State liquor board that the latter reversed decision on the license of Howard E. Ryan, Rockville Pike, Md., whose application was denied by the Montgomery County liquor board.

Catholic Educator, Rev. W. B. Martin, Dies

New Rochelle, N. Y., July 8 (AP).—Priests at Holy Family Catholic Church announced tonight the death in Boston of its pastor, the Rev. W. B. Martin, 63. Father Martin, 39 years a priest, had been ill for some time and had gone to Boston to visit friends.

Father Martin founded the Institute of Scientific Study, which developed between 1911 and 1918 into a regular academic field of postgraduate work for Catholic teachers. He held a doctor of philosophy degree from St. Francis Xavier's College, another from Catholic University in Washington, and an honorary degree from Notre Dame.

U. S. Aides Seek To Avert Metal Workers' Strike

By the Associated Press

Representatives of the Aluminum Workers Union (CIO) and the Aluminum Co. of America conferred separately with Government officials yesterday about the threat of a strike affecting more than 16,000 workers.

Nick Zonarich, union president, said he and three other union officers talked with Sidney Hillman, labor member of the National Defense Commission, and Isador Lubin, Hillman's executive assistant.

The union chief said a 10-cent-an-hour increase was sought and added: "We don't want to delay the defense program, but if there's no other way we'll strike."

M. M. Anderson, the company's director of personnel, also talked with Government representatives.

British Raid Oran Again, Says DNB

Berlin, July 8 (INS).—New British aerial raids on the French naval base at Oran, Algeria, were reported by the official German news agency DNB tonight, quoting French reports received at Geneva.

It was said the British planes took off from an aircraft carrier stationed in the Mediterranean just off Oran. At least two of the British planes were said to have been shot down by French antiaircraft fire.

In the last raid, two days ago, the shattered hulks of three French battleships were bombed, rendering them beyond repair, according to reports.

Soap Will Purge WPA Murals Held Communistic

New York, July 8 (AP).—Three WPA murals condemned as communistic propaganda faced a soap-and-water bath tonight instead of complete destruction by burning.

The murals, hung recently in the Floyd Bennett Airport administration building, at first were ordered destroyed by Lieut. Col. Brehon B. Somervell, local WPA head, after he received numerous protests that asserted the murals showed the Wright brothers at Kitty Hawk in Russian peasant costumes; a red statue of Josef Stalin with a fallen aviator at his feet; a red star instead of the correct white insignia on a painting of the U. S. Naval Reserve hangar at the field, and a painting of the Soviet plane which flew from Mosco wto California several years ago.

Somervell said it appeared the controversial portions were added recently. Inspection by the municipal art commission six weeks ago showed none of "the funny stuff," he added.

Italy Renews Raids On British Bases

Rome, July 8 (AP).—Renewed air riads with "evidently effective results" at British naval bases at Alexandria and Malta were carried out yesterday, the Italian high command reported today.

Bombers attacked British motorized columns along the frontier between Egypt and Libya, destroying some tanks and armored cars, the communique reported.

Other British motorized columns in the British-Egyptian Sudan, near Kassala, were bombed, along with flying fields at Malkal and Perim.

Tobin Gets Roosevelt To Delay Appointment

Because he does not want to go to the Democratic National Convention "tagged as a spokesman for the White House," Daniel J. Tobin, A. F. L. Teamsters Union president, yesterday persuaded President Roosevelt to put off appointing him as an administrative assistant until after the convention.

He said he would be a delegate-at-large from Indiana, and was "for Roosevelt, first, last and all the time."

Rumanian Riots Kill Many Jews

Bucharest, July 8.—Reports of extensive riots involving the death of large numbers of Jews in the regions of northern Rumania bordering the ceded Bucovina district were received here today. The exact number of those killed has not been confirmed.

Despite the increasing violence, following a long series of unconfirmable reports of pogroms, it is stated both in government and German circles that the present cabinet will seek to restrict anti-Semitism to the gradual legal exclusion of Jews from the national economy, avoiding violence so as not to provoke Russia or to promote disorder.

Another Hearing Slated On FCC Appointment

The Senate Interstate Commerce Committee decided yesterday to hold another hearing on the renomination of Thad Brown as member of the Federal Communications Commission before deciding whether to report it favorably or unfavorably. Two hearings already have been held.

The third hearing, it was said, probably will not be held until after the Congressional recess for the Democratic convention.
